MYSTERY MURDER HELD NEAR SOLUTION

Litvinoff Arrives for Conference With Roosevelt

VOTE HEAVY; TROOPERS HERE

Today

Trouble, No Revolution.
When Death Says It.
Raising Ostriches, for Food.
A Rooster Bridegroom.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IN IOWA a call is made for troops to deal with the farmers' strike, held responsible, justly or otherwise, for the destruction by fire of an important bridge on the Great Northern Railroad.

One farm picket was killed, four injured. A train full of livestock is stopped, the animals turned loose, highways are blocked, great quantities of produce destroyed.

You realize how difficult it would be to start a real revolution in this country, when dissatisfied farmers can fight only with other farmers and revenge themselves on the depression only by destroying other farmers' property.

"TEXAS" GUINAN, dead after a busy career, left information concerning herself that many might take to heart. She made a million dollars, but never had any money because, she said:

"I was always ready to gamble on anything."

Death, when he called at the ward of a small, far-away hospital to which middle-aged Miss Guinan had gone from a barnstorming expedition, might have used her own favorite expression:

"Hello sucker!"

THE RUSSIANS, who try everything, will raise ostriches for food, not for feathers, although the feathers will be sold also.

The ostrich develops a thick layer of fat all over its body to keep out the tropical sun, and that convenient fat will keep out the cold of a Russian winter, even as far north as Moscow.

One pair of ostriches will raise more than a dozen young ones every year. Fully grown, they weigh from 100 to 135 pounds each, and the meat is excellent.

Arizona, New Mexico and other states ought to be interested in that, especially if ostriches could be persuaded to eat ensilage, sweetened with cheap molasses. And they probably could.

IN CANTON, China, parents of a pretty girl decided she must be married at once while they were still alive.

Her fiance was away in Singapore, so—and this is said on the authority of the solemn Associated Press—a good-looking rooster was brought in to act as bridegroom throughout the elaborate Chinese marriage service.

If he never returns, she will be better off than some American girls of large fortune, that marry queer, hungry foreign titles.

THE END of prohibition, expected to come with today's voting, will mean an end to part, at least, of amazing bootleg profits.

You know what those profits were when you read the United States indictment accusing Waxey Gordon of evading payment of $572,768 income tax on his "sale of beverages," profits in two years amounting to $2,364,000.

Readers know what prices Americans were willing to pay for whisky, gin, etc., when one of thousands of bootleggers could make more than a million dollars profit a year.

JOHN J. CHAPMAN, who died on Sunday, last, said "education is not baggage, but power," a statement often quoted.

Education is power when it is made useful, otherwise it is only food for vanity. If a man does not use knowledge for the benefit of others, he might as well not have it.

MR. LITVINOFF, arriving to arrange business and other relations, will report to Stalin that he was received with courtesy, as a personage of distinction.

Reaching Washington this afternoon, he will be taken at once to see the President and tomorrow he and Secretary of State Hull will lunch at the White House.

YESTERDAY the dollar went down while the British pound went up, the dollar finding a new "low spot" in international exchange. The pound compared with the dollar went above its par value in the old days of gold.

This doesn't please the British, because buying with cheap dollars in this country is more attractive than buying with expensive pounds in England. Both dollars and francs are "fleeing" to London.

FRANCE HAS arranged a "mass flight" of 30 airplanes, and this armada of the air will head south toward Africa.

Perhaps the flight is intended to remind Mr. Hitler that an air fleet 100 times as great might one day be headed in a different direction, on a day's notice.

THE ITALIAN King, his hand guided by Mussolini, removed Gen. Balbo as air marshal, sending him to North Africa, making Mussolini himself head of the air force and also of the navy.

GIRL MURDER SOLUTION NEAR

Stains on Clothing Of Prisoner Tested In Blood Hunt

Confident that they had identified the morgue's mystery girl correctly as Margaret Schwickrath, county detectives today announced they were near a solution of her murder.

On the clothing of Roy A. Mull, one of the three prisoners held in the case, they said they had found stains they believed were blood. These were to be analyzed by a chemist.

STORIES CONFLICT

The stories of Mull, his wife, Grace and his son Elmer, who lived in a North Side rooming house with the slain girl and police believe, were the last to see her alive, did not agree in important particulars, said Detective Peter A. Connors and Michael McDermott.

The two detectives were searching the Mulls' rooms late today for further evidence and they planned a minute examination of Mull's slate-colored sedan.

This car looked "very much like" one seen near the sewer drop at Verona where the girl's body was found October 30, the detectives quoted two witnesses as saying.

GREENSBURG PROBE

Meanwhile, at Greensburg on the case were Detectives Thomas Calig, John Ferrara and Samuel Whisner. They were to question John Schwickrath, Margaret's brother, who declared he had found clues to the slayer at Haydenville, or "The Onion," where the Mulls, who have a cabin there, last saw Margaret.

The detectives were interested also in probing further into the tangled love affairs of the Mulls. Mull, they said, admitted he had been the dead girl's lover, and Mrs. Mull told them she knew of the relationship, but "didn't care two pins."

Betty Blythe Cast In Role of Mother

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Betty Blythe, the "it" girl of screen productions a decade or more ago, is returning to the screen in the role of a mother.

Fox studios announced signing the actress for a part in a picture starring George O'Brien. She will enact the role of mother of Mary Brian.

Adrienne and Bruce To Golf in Hawaii

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Adrienne Ames and Bruce Cabot, film players, who were married recently in New Mexico, will leave next Saturday on a honeymoon to Hawaii, they said today.

Miss Ames said:

"We shall play golf a great deal in and near Honolulu; my husband wins sometimes."

Ruth Bryan Owen's Daughter Files Suit

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Suit for divorce was filed here by Kitty Owen Meeker, daughter of Ruth Bryan Owen, United States Minister to Denmark, against her husband, W. P. Meeker. She charged cruelty. The Meekers have three children.

LITVINOFF IN U. S. TO SEE ROOSEVELT

Soviet Envoy Predicts Meeting Will Bring Recognition, Peace

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Maxim Litvinoff, commissar of foreign affairs for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, came to America today to make the "first breach in that artificial barrier which has, for 16 years, prevented normal intercourse between the peoples of our two countries."

He expressed the hope that the establishment of normal relations between the United States and the Soviet would bring about actual disarmament, and he said that he nourished the most sanguine hopes as to the outcome of his mission.

Arriving on the Berengaria, Litvinoff was taken to Jersey City where he boarded a five-car special train for Washington for his conversations with President Roosevelt.

He was landed at Pier 8 from the cutter Manhattan, which brought him and his party from the liner at Quarantine.

STRONG GUARD AT PIER

Only a few persons were permitted on the pier, which was guarded by 150 uniformed policemen, 90 detectives and some Secret Service men.

Litvinoff arrived aboard the Berengaria after a hurried trip from Moscow, which started immediately after the exchange of notes between Presidents Roosevelt and Kalinin. He was officially welcomed by James C. Dunn, chief of protocol in the State Department, and was accorded every honor that usually is given to the envoy of a recognized country.

JOHN S. HERRON . . . DROPPING HIS BALLOT

FEDERAL PROSECUTOR JOINS IN WATCH FOR FRAUD

With state police and the United States Attorney on guard against fraud, the voters of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County went to the polls today in the first local election in years with the aspects of a real contest.

Reports from scattered districts were that the early vote had been fairly heavy, despite the drizzling weather.

Among the first at the polls was William N. McNair, Democratic mayoralty candidate. With Mrs. McNair he cast his ballot at 8 o'clock in a garage at Grafton and Farragutt streets, polling place for the Tenth District of the Eleventh Ward.

After he had voted, McNair went on a tour of polling places. Merely by coincidence he arrived at the polling place where Mayor Herron was casting his vote while the Mayor was in the booth.

Mayor Herron and his wife voted at 10 o'clock at the Homewood school, Hamilton and Lang avenues, polling place for the First District of the Thirteenth Ward.

MORE BOOTHS ASKED

At the same hour a call was made on the Bureau of Elections for additional booths for polling places. This indicated, officials said, that the vote was heavier than had been anticipated.

There were 400 additional booths sent out. The use of four ballots, officials said, contributed to the need for these.

At the bureau it was said 40 state troopers were watching the polls and were confining their attention to the city. In the county 39 county police were on the same duty.

To the same bureau came a complaint that in many districts the "chain ballot" was being used. This device consists of handing a marked ballot to a voter with such a fee as he will accept. He deposits the ballot and returns his blank ballot to be passed on—marked—to the next paid voter. The bureau promised an investigation.

Hardly had the polls opened than complaints began to dribble in to Judge Elder W. Marshall, sitting in Common Pleas Court to receive them.

Judge Marshall was joined later by Judges Samuel H. Gardner and John P. Egan. After hearing a dozen complaints they ruled at noon that no election board members might be interfered with except by specific order of the court.

Mary Wigman Breaks Arm Following Dance

DUISBURG, Germany, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Mary Wigman, the dancer, was in a hospital today with a broken arm, suffered when she slipped on a dimly lighted staircase as she was leaving a stage following a performance.

Miss Wigman, who caused a storm of comment when she paid her first visit to the United States in 1930, is recognized as a leader of the modern dance. In one of her dances, she spins like a whirling dervish for seven minutes. Few dancers can do this for more than three.

Roosevelt Casts Ballot by Mail

6 States Vote On Repeal; End Of Dry Law Seen

Associated Press.

Voters in half a dozen widely-scattered states today are inscribing the answer to whether 13 years of national prohibition shall end next month.

Of almost equal importance to a large portion of the electorate is New York City's three-way mayoral contest in which Tammany's long reign is at stake.

Elsewhere on the off-year November election horizon—in scattered city and state elections—political observers hoped to gauge sentiment with an eye to Congressional campaigns next year.

Confidence that the balloting in Pennsylvania, Ohio, North and South Carolina, Kentucky and Utah would climax the administration's campaign to restore liquor was expressed by Postmaster General Farley, who also brought the national administration a bit closer to the New York

Beer Banned as State Ballots on Repeal

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—While Pennsylvania cast its decision on proposed repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, 3.2 per cent beer could not be purchased legally in the state today.

Statute prohibits the sale, bartering and giving away of the brew on election day.

Schumann-Heink Ill in Hospital

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, world famous contralto, and "mother" of ex-service men, was in the Mercy Hospital today suffering from an intestinal infection which may be an attack of appendicitis.

Dr. Charles M. Fox, her son-in-law and physician, said the condition of the 72-year-old singer was not considered serious.

Rain Balks Lindy Flight to Geneva

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Bad weather over the Rhineland today forced Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh to abandon their attempt to fly from Amsterdam to Geneva.

A few hours after their departure they encountered rain and mist. They turned back and landed at Rotterdam.

BAKERS HERE END STRIKE

The strike of 400 bakers and truck drivers of the Ward and Baur baking companies had been settled today.

By its terms the bakers return to work today and the drivers tomorrow.

Bakery Drivers' Union, No. 485, and Bakery Workers' Union, No. 12, were both recognized by the companies, according to Sam Wehofer, business agent of the latter union. Hours and wages are to be negotiated, he asserted.

Retract Debt Slur, Soviet Tells Reich

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—A categorical demand has been made by Russian Ambassador Chinchuk upon the German government for a public disavowal of a reference by Hermann Wilhelm Goering to the alleged failure of the Soviet Union to pay its bills.

Britain to Continue Debt Token Payments

U. S. Will Receive $7,500,000 on December 15

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Failing in its effort to obtain a reduction of its $4,500,000,000 debt to the United States, the British government has decided to make another "token payment" on December 15 next.

The December "token" will consist of $7,500,000 to be paid in United States currency, on an obligation due on that date of some $91,000,000. Last June, the British government made a token payment of $10,000,000, the medium of payment on that occasion being silver.

Thus, Britain escapes the onus of complete default on her indebtedness, which has characterized the policy of France and her continental allies.

France to Continue Default on Debt

PARIS, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—France's debt default policy, officials said today, is unaltered by Great Britain's decision to renew the token payment.

Nazi Ax Beheads Woman Torturer

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—A woman lost her head under the executioner's ax at Guben today, the third criminal to die by this Nazi method in two days.

She was Mrs. Elsa Ziehm, wife of a school master, convicted of torturing and poisoning a 7-year-old boy to get an inheritance.

Wreck of Dixmude Sighted off Sicily

PALERMO, Sicily, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Fishermen reported today they had located the skeleton of the French dirigible Dixmude which disappeared on a flight to Africa in December, 1923, with 52 men aboard.

The craft the fishermen said lies in water 130 feet deep about two and one-half miles from the town of Menfi. The French government was notified.

VIOLENCE RAGES AS N. Y. VOTES

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Violence and disorders accompanied voting in the municipal elections today with Fusion forces threatening to demand protection of National Guard troops from gangs of marauding thugs.

One man was stabbed, a score of election workers blackjacked and beaten and an entire election board arrested as voters balloted in one of the stormiest elections in a generation in which Tammany is fighting for survival and national political influences are exerting strong outside pressure.

Mayor Herron, 61, Runs on Birthday

Mayor John S. Herron is receiving some kind of a birthday present from the voters of Pittsburgh.

He is 61 today, and the voters crowding the polls either are singing "Happy Birthday to You" or the plaintive snatch from a popular song, "Why Was I Born?"

R. B. Mellon's Income For Year $3,598,931

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Richard Beatty Mellon, Pittsburgh banker and brother of Andrew W. Mellon, has asked the Board of Tax Appeals to redetermine an $18,951 deficiency assessment against his 1930 income taxes.

Mellon, president of the Mellon Bank of Pittsburgh, reported in his petition, filed yesterday, that his total income in 1930 was $3,598,931.

His taxable income was fixed at $3,551,905 and a tax of $684,118 was determined by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Later, however, it raised the figure to $703,069 and sent Mellon notice he was deficient in his return by $18,951.

In declaring the deficiency, the bureau held Mellon should have included in his income $143,828 in dividends from the Mellbank Corporation, and a profit of an insurance policy. It denied certain commission adjustments claimed by Mellon on the lease of the Hotel Pittsburgher.

Downtown Throngs See Boys Saved From River

Thrown into the Allegheny River when waves from a passing tugboat swamped their canoe, two young men from Brownsville, Pa., today were rescued while crowds watched from the Sixth and Seventh Street bridges and downtown buildings nearby.

The boys, John Hess and Martin Jacobs, both 18, are on their way from Brownsville to Buffalo. They expected to go as far as they could by river and then hitchhike the remainder of the journey.

But today, after being pulled out of the cold waters by James Harron, who went to their aid in a skiff, they said they were tired of river travel. As they warmed themselves by a fire in a houseboat on the north bank they both declared they were "through canoeing."

The boys had just passed under the Sixth Street Bridge on their way up the Allegheny when waves from the towboat Criterion upset the canoe.

They held on to the overturned boat until rescued and were able to save the canoe and one paddle. They started from Brownsville Wednesday. A relative of one of the boys promised both jobs in Buffalo, one of them said.

Important Notice To Election Boards

At the close of the polls tonight, a representative of the Tri-state Election Service will call upon you for election results. He will carry an identification card as an authorized collector of returns for the Pittsburgh newspapers.

Please give him totals as soon as they are available. Any other co-operation will be appreciated by THE EDITOR.

JOHNSON CITES COAL PEACE AS NRA'S GREATEST GAIN

PRESS FREEDOM ASSURED, HE DECLARES

Opposed to Thought Of License for Newspapers

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Confidence that the NRA can cope successfully with all labor problems as they arise was expressed by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, at a press conference here. He said:

"In the Pennsylvania bituminous coal situation we were confronted with the worst conditions in the world. We have brought about an adjustment there which is working out beautifully. I don't say that we always will be as successful, but it's a good indication of what can be done."

Johnson admitted that the trouble between the rival miners' unions in Southern Illinois created a very perplexing question, but asserted he expected the NRA to solve that problem the same as it had "other lemons."

HIGH SPOT OF NRA

The solution of the trouble in the Pennsylvania bituminous field is one of the bright spots of our work. It has shown us that it is possible to have a real partnership between worker and employer. It shows what can be done and gives us the confidence needed to go on."

Touching on the subject with which he dealt at length in his address here yesterday, Johnson said that the administration had never at any time considered any action to limit the freedom of the press. He declared:

"Radio stations are operating under government license. There have been plenty of attacks on the NRA in broadcast speeches. We have never attempted to edit or suppress anything on the air."

GETS 'SQUARE DEAL'

Johnson declared that while he did not seek publicity, nor want it, he had probably received more publicity than any other man in history. He added:

"And I've received a wonderfully square deal from the press."

Today at St. Paul, Minn., Johnson stepped into the scene of farm unrest and said:

"All things considered, things seem to be going better than I expected."

Declaring the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is moving just as hard and fast as it can, Johnson asserted:

"If the farmers could form a code of fair competition they would be entitled to admittance under the NRA, but there are 6,000,000 of them of all shades of thought and action."

CITES PRICE RISE

Washington figures indicated, he said, that farm prices have increased 32 per cent compared with a 17 per cent increase in the price of things farmers must buy.

Regarding the Indiana State Restaurant Association's executive committee, which, today, recommended removal of the Blue Eagle until a code on an enforcible basis had been framed, Johnson said:

'There has not been a restaurant code drawn up yet. It may be completed, however, in a few days, and, when it is, it probably won't be in its present form. One of the difficulties with that code is the unconscionably long hours restaurant people are seeking and the arrangements to be made between wages and tips."

9,000 FORD MEN ON 'VACATION'

Universal Service.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 7.—Nine thousand Ford employes will be idle each week as long as the Ford Motor Company is required by the NRA to keep average working hours at 35 a week, officials said today.

This was the only statement forthcoming from the company's offices at Dearborn as the first 9,000 started their enforced layoff.

No official would comment on Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's suggestion that NRA requirements might be modified to some extent if it were shown that the Ford production system required perpetuation of the 44-week now in effect.

In seven days the men now idle will be recalled to work, under the annual needs plan, and another group of 9,000 will be laid off. The plan of periodical layoffs will remain in force, one official said, "until such time as the government ends the prohibition against work."

Mrs. Pinchot Snubbed, Blames Steel Trust

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Asserting she had no reply from her telegraphed request to Vandergrift officials for permission to make an NRA address in the borough Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor, says she presumes the steel interests are responsible.

Commenting on her statement Raymond Dunmeyer, president of the Vandergrift School Board, said last night Mrs. Pinchot would be advised "in plenty of time." Mrs. Pinchot said:

"I have not had the courtesy of a reply from Burgess Dick or President Dunmeyer, of Vandergrift, to my telegram, saying I wanted to accept an invitation to come to Vandergrift to talk about the NRA and President Roosevelt's recovery program.

"I presume the steel interests are responsible as I am told they were previously in blocking a committee of Vandergrift citizens from trying to get a hall for me to speak in several weeks ago."

Dunmeyer said Mrs. Pinchot's request for the use of the high school building would be laid before the school board as quickly as possible. Burgess Dick said he had no authority in the matter.

FARM STRIKE PICKETS HIDE

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—A motorcade of strike breaking farmers scoured roads north of Sioux City today in an unsuccessful attempt to locate pickets.

Gathering near the city limits, 11 autos containing 50 farmers, armed with baseball bats, ax handles and clubs, found one camp site deserted, but with a fire still burning.

The group then left with the intention of going to Lemars to advise Sheriff Rippey that they planned to keep the highways open themselves unless he took the proper action to do so.

Reports were that members of the Sioux City Milk Producers' Association intended to run the blockade, but a search failed to locate any milk trucks.

Sub-freezing temperature apparently had the effect of removing the pickets from the highways.

Sioux City police were held in readiness for possible outbreaks in the city limits, but no pickets were in evidence.

Calling of National Guard troops appeared indefinitely delayed pending possible further outbreaks. Sheriff William Tice said he did not plan to request troops unless conditions become more serious.

Third Rail Bridge Burned by Strikers

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 7.—(INS.)—A railroad bridge on the main line of the Illinois Central Railroad between Cleghorn and Meriden, northeast of here, was destroyed today by fire.

It was the third railway bridge burning in this farm strike center within less than a week. Both previous blazes were of incendiary origin, according to authorities, who blamed them on farm strikers.

Court Test Faces Oil Code Control

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Already confronted with the first direct challenge of the constitutionality of the NRA code covering the oil industry, the Federal Petroleum Administrative Board today faced another vital decision on whether to prohibit the lease and agency system by which big corporations control retail outlets for oil products.

Harry Victor, of Detroit, and other filling station operators in the Michigan city are suing for an injunction against a provision of the code prohibiting premiums on the retail selling of gasoline and motor oil.

GOLD'S UPSWING HALTED BY U. S.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The upward price swing for newly mined domestic gold was halted at least temporarily today when an RFC price of $32.84 an ounce was set for the metal, representing no change from the previous quotation.

The local price came in the face of dispatches from London telling of new gold weakness which had developed there.

The London opening slipped off to 129 shillings 11½ pence, representing a drop of one shilling 10½ pence.

The United States equivalent of the London price was $31.84 on the basis of sterling opening at $4.90.

NRA COMPLAINT BLANKS HERE

Blanks provided by the National Recovery Administration to be used by persons wishing to report violations of NRA codes have been received at the Pittsburgh postoffice for distribution in this district.

Prospective complainants are directed to fill in the blanks and mail them to the district NRA compliance director or the Department of Labor. Complaints must be sworn to before a notary by at least one witness familiar with the facts.

Complainants are advised to state sufficient facts to indicate a clear infraction of some definite provision of the code to which the alleged violator is subject. Complainants are asked to signify whether their names can be used, if necessary.

In an early period of prohibition enforcement a somewhat similar blank form was prepared to invite reports on liquor violations in this district.

They were never used, being withdrawn when it was realized they would result in many false reports due to grudges.

Opponents of the use of such blanks referred to them as "snoopers' reports."

NRA PREPARES FOR VOTE AT MINES

Union Official Fights Presence of Deputies At Polls

Representatives of the National Labor Board, here today to prepare for elections of the miners' representatives in captive mines, were advised by union officials to keep company deputies away from the polls.

A delegation from the board, headed by Jesse I. Miller, assistant to the chairman, and Dr. William M. Leiserson, secretary, scouted through the Western fields yesterday and last night.

They interviewed operators, miners and union officials.

James F. Dewey, United States Department of Labor mediator, and Richard Leustadt, state labor representative, familiar with the district, broke the path for the party.

OPPOSES DEPUTIES

Hynes, president of District No. 4, United Mine Workers, suggested they keep company police away from the polls and hold the balloting off company property to assure fair elections. He explained:

"The men will be afraid to vote if they have to go to polls past company deputies."

The mechanics of the election—including the specific questions on which the men will vote—the promise of which is sending 20,000 men back to their diggings—are receiving attention.

The biggest question of all—just what constitutes union recognition and if mine owners will concede it if the men so vote—was still unanswered today.

U. S. TAKES CHARGE

The most significant indication of the board's attitude on recognition came from Leiserson. Told that the operators of captive mines do not expect to give their men the opportunity to vote for or against unions, and plan to offer them the chance of electing only new officials of the company unions, he said:

"We are running this election and we will decide how it's to be run."

There will probably be about 15 NRA and National Labor Board men on hand to supervise the election, which is not expected to take place for some days.

Roosevelt Signs Twelve More Codes

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—President Roosevelt today approved 12 more codes, bringing the total to 98.

The last batch approved included those for stock exchange firms, business furniture, office equipment, washing and ironing machines, buffing and polishing wheel, buffing and polishing composition, toy, men's garter, leather and woolen-knit gloves, floor and wall clay tile, funeral supply, and the piano industry.

Philadelphia Faces Taxi Driver Strike

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—A general strike of the city's 1,200 taxi cab drivers threatens because of alleged discrimination by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, operators of a fleet of cabs, against its co-operative association.

The drivers are to vote on the strike question next Monday.

DODGE BOUGHT FOR BANKERS BY PUBLIC

Quiz Shows Control Acquired Without Investment

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Evidence that bankers gained control of the $150,000,000 Dodge Motor Company in 1925 without the investment of a single penny was pondered today by Senate stock market investigators with a view to possible open inquiry.

The evidence, gathered from the books of Dillon, Read & Co., shows a banking syndicate headed by that firm purchased the automobile company from the Dodge family with money subscribed by the public and retained the voting stock in its own hands.

In addition to gaining control of the company, the bankers realized profits of millions from selling the securities to the public. Later the company was sold to Chrysler in exchange for Chrysler stock.

Because of this evidence, committee members may decide to reopen the Dillon, Read inquiry, but they had reached no decision today.

The Dodge company sale was one of the biggest cash transactions in history. The bankers' syndicate paid for the company in a single check for $146,000,000.

Whether the committee goes into that operation depends to a large extent upon time. Efforts are being made to wind up the hearings within a few weeks so a report can be submitted to Congress in January.

NRA SEES COAL RISING 20 PCT.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The bituminous coal code should not increase the retail price of coal more than 20 per cent, according to a survey made public today by the NRA Consumers' Advisory Board. The board's report stated:

"About a half of the retail price of soft coal goes to the retail dealer, while less than a third goes to the railroad, and of the rest probably seldom more than 20 per cent goes to the mine operators. This means that even if mine prices of coal should double, the retail price need not rise more than 20 per cent to cover the greater mining charges.

"The coal code does not change the minimum union wage scales of miners in Illinois, Indiana and the Rocky Mountain coal region.

"It raises the lower wage rate of competing fields and of non-union mines so that their rate will not give them so great a competitive advantage.

"This means that Illinois, Indiana and the Far West should be able to supply coal as cheaply as they ever could, and that the rest of the country is forbidden to invade their market by means of low wages."

MINERS ATTACK U. S. TRUCK

International News Service.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Nov. 7.—Violence in the northern anthracite strike field flared anew today as pickets let loose a barrage of stones, injuring six persons and damaging several automobiles, one of them a federal government vehicle.

Seven men on a truck of the federal Department of Agriculture, apparently mistaken for miners en route to work, were showered with stones at Du Pont. Three of them were cut and bruised.

The automobile of John O'Toole, Scranton, a salesman en route to Pottsville was attacked and damaged by flying stones. Windows in the cars of Nicholas Candrea, Dunmore, a salesman, also were shattered by stones.

Other motorists not connected with the strike movement were attacked by pickets.

Secret Bride

FRANCES WILLIAMS

ACTRESS WEDS POLO PLAYER

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 7.—"Well . . . er . . . we weren't going to broadcast it so soon. But . . . well, yes, we were married a month ago in Mexico, and . . . of course . . . we want all the world to know it. And we're going to be married again, next Saturday."

Thus Frances Williams, pretty blonde musical comedy star and screen player, hesitatingly confirmed a rumor that she had recently married Miguel de Sousa, polo player and Hollywood businessman.

The second ceremony, she revealed, is scheduled to take place Saturday night at the home of a friend, Mrs. Josephine Cooper, with Superior Judge D. S. Valentine tying the final knot.

Miss Williams, in March, 1930, was sued in Pittsburgh by Mrs. Bertha Jones, of Beaver Falls, who asked $100,000 for the alienation of affections of her husband, Alan, piano-playing Broadway stage star and one-time Pittsburgh taxicab driver. In April, 1931, Miss Williams married Lester Clark, a trumpet player, divorced him just a year later, and in February, 1932, settled the Jones suit out of court for a reported $2,500.

Investment Bankers Have Code Rejected

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The country's investment bankers today had their proposed code of fair competition rejected by NRA because it did not provide for establishment of fair practices for the protection of the public.

Arthur D. Whiteside, divisional administrator, said the bankers did not appear to have "taken the matter seriously" and that they had missed "a splendid opportunity to do something constructive and helpful for the industry and for the country as a whole."

Baldwin Sees U. S. Near Dictatorship

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—The United States is virtually "under a dictatorship," Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, told the National Labor Committee at a luncheon yesterday, saying:

"The ordinary Constitution has certainly broken down in the United States, and they are practically under a dictatorship."

LITVINOFF IN U. S. TO SEE ROOSEVELT

Soviet Envoy Predicts Meeting Will Bring Recognition, Peace

can affairs boarded the Berengaria from the Coast Guard cutter Manhattan. The cutter Hudson carried newspaper men to the liner.

As the two cutters drew alongside, Litvinoff stood on an upper deck and waved his handkerchief. He was smiling broadly.

Dunn greeted him in the ship's smoking room. He said:

"It is a pleasure to know you, Mr. Litvinoff."

Litvinoff, still smiling, extended his hand and said:

"How do you do."

By this time, photographers were perched on every table and chair in the room and men requesting the envoy to smile and wave his hand. Litvinoff wore a broad-brimmed black hat, a plain blue tie, a white scarf, blue coat and striped trousers. He is short and stocky and he appears to be always smiling.

ENVOY'S STATEMENT

He decided that he had been sufficiently photographed, and declared:

"I now wish to say something to the press.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I am setting foot today on the territory of the great American republic with a keen sense of the privilege that is mine in being the first official representative to bring greetings to the American people from the peoples of the Soviet Union.

"I realize that I am, in a way, making the first breech in that artificial barrier which has for 16 years prevented normal intercourse between the peoples of our two countries.

"The anamolous nature of the situation has now been recognized by both sides, and the first step taken toward clearing it up."

PRAISES ROOSEVELT

"I am looking forward to the pleasure and honor of making the acquaintance of your President, who has given yet another proof of his wisdom and broad views by taking the initiative in addressing Mr. Kalinin. I also will be very glad to renew my acquaintance with your Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, whom I met at the economic conference in London."

"Although there are as yet no official contracts, our countries have always felt and continue to feel that they are united by common aspirations for peace.

"The opinions expressed all over the world on the messages which have passed between our presidents have shown the hopes raised among all the friends of peace, and the fears felt by the adversaries of peace, on the very thought of the establishment of solid, friendly relations between the people of the two greatest republics in the world.

"All these things encourage me to nourish the most sanguine hopes as to the outcome of the mission placed upon me, and as to the future of Soviet-American relations."

Roosevelt Waits Talk With Soviet Envoy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt and Maxim Litvinoff clasp hands today across a years-old gap of diplomatic indifference.

An end to the "present abnormal relations" between Russia and the United States was the announced objective of Mr. Roosevelt in welcoming the Soviet republic's spokesman.

Formal recognition is the known desire of Litvinoff, Russian commisar of foreign affairs, and at least a preliminary understanding looking toward recognition is the expectation of Washington's official circles.

The blue room of the White House was selected for this first meeting in 16 years between an American president and a representative of Russia's 160,000,000 people. There, at 6 o'clock tonight, Litvinoff will be presented to Mr. Roosevelt by Secretary Hull after the trip from New York under special guard.

This first handshake may prove only a formality, but in administration circles it holds possibilities of a swift understanding between the President and Litvinoff.

Mr. Roosevelt will do his own negotiating in the "frank, friendly conversations" to which he invited Litvinoff. This fact, coupled with the Russian's international reputation for blunt, cards-on-the-table diplomacy, spells in some quarters a speedy solution of problems saparating the two nations.

60,000 Soviet Troops Reviewed by Stalin

By LINTON WELLS
International News Service.

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—The long arm of coincidence reached out today to supply the world with a clear picture of Soviet Russia's military prowess at the very moment Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff was reaching the United States to discuss recognition with President Roosevelt.

While military preparedness and the ever-present threat of war in the Far East will ostensibly have no place in the Washington discussions, Litvinoff's arrival occurred simultaneously with the greatest military demonstration in Soviet history.

It was staged to commemorate the sixteenth anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution.

It was estimated 60,000 troops marched in review before Dictator Josef Stalin, President Michael Kalinin and Premier V. M. Molotov, who stood with other high Soviet officials for several hours while rain beat down upon them and 750,000 cheering workers massed near Lenin's tomb in Red Square.

The inclement weather, bringing with it a low ceiling of only 300 feet, prevented what promised to be the most impressive feature of the entire review. Two thousand airplanes were poised in nearby airfields ready to participate in a gigantic display.

ARNO, CHIP ON SHOULDER, SEEKS RETURN BOUT WITH FOE

PRAISES SALLY FOR RUSHING TO HIS RESCUE

Artist Asserts No One Can Sock Him and Get Away With It

HOLLYWOD, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The pugilistically inclined New York cartoonist, Peter Arno, recovering from a one-punch knockout in the early hours of yesterday morning at the fashionable Embassy Club, was seeking a return engagement today with Drexel Biddle Steel, Philadelphia actor and entertainer.

Arno, rubbing his chin, declared:

"The next time I see Mr. Steel I'm going to hang one on him that he won't forget for a long, long time. No one can punch Peter Arno in the jaw—or cause his jaw to be punched—and get away with it."

"Really, I'm not angry at Peter. Why, I wouldn't think of continuing this silly feud."

Although some eye-witnesses insist Sally O'Neill, film actress, who had accompanied Arno to the club, went into action with a chair, this was denied by Arno and Miss O'Neill. Arno said:

"Miss O'Neill played but a small part in the affray. She charged gamely to my rescue when she saw Steel raise a chair, and instructed him, gently but firmly, to drop the chair, which he did."

TEX TO RETURN TO BROADWAY FOR LAST TIME

Cabaret Queen Gave 'Fortune' Away Before Death

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Texas Guinan, who made a fortune out of Broadway's "suckers," and then shared her "butter and egg money" with distressed friends, charities and gambling rackets, tonight starts her last trip to the Great White Way.

The 40 girls of the night club hostess' troupe said she was generous and kind to them. In the 30 days before she died here Sunday following an operation, they said, the "hoofers" and "fan dancers" understood she gave $75,000 to old friends and charities, but did it unobstrusively.

The show must go on, she told them just before she died, but they couldn't go on without her, so engagements were cancelled.

Tom Guinan, her brother, said today the body would be placed tonight on a train for Seattle, then taken to Chicago and New York, for funeral services in St. Malachi's Church.

There were no services here, but she received the ministrations of her church before she died.

Texas Good Girl, Mae West Says, Recalling Friendship

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The world of entertainment lost "a good friend and a splendid show woman" in the death of Texas Guinan in Vancouver, Mae West, long time friend of the night club hostesses said here today. She stated:

"I had known Texas for nearly 10 years, and her death came as a terrible shock. Although the public probably had the impression that Texas was only a night club promoter who exemplified all that goes with night clubs, she regarded that end of her life as th 'business' side of it.

"When she left her night club she lived a normal life. It may be hard to believe in the light of all the hey-hey publicity given her that she did not drink. Many a time I have known her to close up her club at 5 o'clock in the morning, then ride around in the park until time for church.

"We've all lost a good friend and splendid show woman."

DENVER, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Theater-goers recalled today that Texas Guinan came here with her parents from a potato ranch in Texas when she was about 16, and shortly afterward married Jack Moynahan, a newspaper cartoonist, who was her first husband.

BEAUTY SOBS ACCUSATION OF ARMY STAR

Prominent Texans Linked By Girl in Murrel Case

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Sobbing and incoherent at times, Blanche Ralls today told the story of an alleged criminal attack of Lieut. John H. Murrel, former all-America football star, at a preliminary hearing for the lieutenant before United States Commissioner P. A. Lockhart.

Starting with a dancing party at the St. Anthony Hotel and following with details of an early morning visit to a night club, Miss Ralls 28-year-old Alabama beauty, reached the climax of her testimony when she described the asserted attack.

Without the slightest sign of recognition, the army officer and Miss Ralls faced each other across a table as the hearing was held to determine whether bond for Lieut. Murrel would be recommended by Commissioner Lockhart. The lieutenant had been in jail since October 27.

LINKS PROMINENT MEN

Miss Ralls gave the names of several prominent San Antonians as members of the dancing party, including Phil Wright, Jr., son of Fire and Police Commissioner Wright.

She said the attack occurred while Lieut. Murrel was driving her home in his car. She sobbed:

"I told him I'd tell my brother and he'd be killed, but he said he'd gotten away with it before and he'd do it again."

She testified the alleged attack occurred in a ditch filled with weeds, and that when she screamed she was threatened with having her "head beat to a pulp" if she didn't stop.

PLEA REFUSED

In a statement given a few days ago to District Attorney Smith, Miss Ralls said she had been married twice, the first time in March, 1922, at he age of 16 and the second time in January, 1931. She has a son 11 years old by her first marriage, it was stated, and has filed suit for divorce against her second husband.

A motion for the discharge of the defendant filed by Egbert Schweppe, chief defense counsel, was overruled by Commissioner Lockhart.

Lieut. Murrel entered the court room accompanied by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Murrel, and his sister, Miss Rae Murrel. United States Marshal Guy McNamara, with two uniformed customs inspectors and two deputy marshals, guarded the lieutenant.

Miss Ralls was accompanied by Maj. R. K. Whitson, Fort Sam Houston provost marshal.

COUPLE FIRED ON, WIFE HIT

From an automobile truck speeding in the Ohio River boulevard late last night four shots were fired at a man and his wife as they walked toward their home.

Three of the bullets missed their mark. The fourth imbedded itself in the instep of the right foot of Mrs. Mary Michalisin, 22, of 2708 California avenue. It was from a .32-caliber revolver, according to Woods Run police.

Neither Mrs. Michalisin, nor her husband, Michael, could explain the attack. And the truck sped on, disappearing into the darkness before either could obtain its license number.

George Salter, of 20 East Forest avenue, Bellevue, a passing motorist, took Mrs. Michalisin to Allegheny General Hospital, where the injury was treated. Although her condition is not serious, she was detained at the hospital.

M'CREADY CHILD GUARDIAN ASKED

Appointment of a guardian for Margaret Luella McCready, 4, daughter of Harrison R. McCready, Pittsburgh playboy, will be asked tomorrow by Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, representing the child's mother, Mrs. Margaret Long Welfer, divorced from McCready.

Attorney Charles J. Margiotti and his law partner, former Judge John E. Evans and Allan H. Kerr, who represent McCready, have been served with notice of Mrs. Welfer's intended action, it was learned today.

McCready is endeavoring to have a $150,000 trust fund set aside, which he established for the benefit of his former wife. The Commonwealth Trust Company is the trustee of the fund.

Eaton's reason for asking a guardian is stated to be that the child is interested in property now in litigation.

Judge Samuel H. Gardner a few days ago began hearing testimony in McCready's suit to annul the trust on the ground that he did not know what he was doing when he created it. The hearing was continued to Monday, November 13 to enable McCready, who had gone on a spree, to sober up.

Another low is centered over Alberta, causing cloudy weather and light snow in the far Northwest. High pressure overlies the Rocky Mountain states and spreads eastward to near the Atlantic coast. CAROL ASSAILED BY EX-PREMIER International News Service.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 7.—Ex-Premier Maniu, peasant party leader and King Carol's most redoubtable enemy, today laid his cards on the table.

Maniu has now opened his attack against Carol with a violent semi-secret manifesto bearing the title, "The Clock Has Struck."

The article bitterly attacks Mme. Magda Lupescu, Carol's mistress, and the court "Camarilla." The present situation at court is summed up as follows:

"Queen Helena has been virtually expelled from the country and has been separated from her beloved son. The soul of this child is being poisoned by immorality and he is forced to live without his mother for the sake of a favorite!

"How long are we to stand this? The clock has struck. We, the revolted citizens of this country, are going to organize ourselves into "steel guards," and the violence of our struggle will be without precedence in this country. But we shall win!"

Principal Objects To Guns in Class

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Principal Arthur M. Nichelson, of the Hirsch High School has strenuous objections to 17-year-old William Sheets or any other student carrying revolvers to classes.

CO-ED TOTES GUN TO CLASS

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Margaret Hise, senior journalism student, carried a revolver to her University of Iowa classes today as police continued investigation of extortion letters which she has received during the past 10 days.

An all night guard was stationed last night at the Delta Delta Delta Sorority house where Miss Hise is a member, after she received a third threatening letter demanding that she have her father "dig up $10,000 and have it ready."

Two telephone calls for Miss Hise were received at the sorority house last night but the caller hung up before they could be traced.

Miss Hise said she received the first letter October 26, but "thought it was a joke and tore it up." When a second note came in the mail, however, she became alarmed and turned it over to the police.

A note which read "we are watching you," was found inside the screen of her bedroom window at the sorority house Saturday.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 7.—(INS.)—The two-day-old son of Ernest Merli, New Jersey banker, today held the honor of being one of the youngest persons ever to use the trans-Atlantic telephone.

He didn't care much for it, apparently.

Merli, in Germany on business, called a hospital here, where his wife had given birth to the baby.

He talked with his wife, then the phone was placed close to the infant.

"Hello, son!"

Thus spoke Merli from Berlin at $11 a minute.

"Wah," responded the baby, and went back to sleep.

WOMAN FREED AFTER 20 YRS.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The freedom of Bessie Wakefield, a cause celebre for a generation of Connecticut women, had been won today. The Board of Pardons granted her a full pardon for the slaying of her husband.

Mrs. Wakefield, 44, a central figure in a noted murder case, was pardoned late yesterday after her seventeenth appearance before the board.

The members of the Bessie Wakefield Society, headed by Mrs. Ernest Thompson-Seton, Greenwich writer and explorer, told the board a home awaited Mrs. Wakefield in Reading, Pa. Mrs. Thompson-Seton said the pardoned woman was "a high type of Christian woman" through her education in prison.

Mrs. Wakefield was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1914 after a group of women aroused by the death penalty imposed on her in her first trial, took her case to the Superior Court of Errors and obtained a second trial.

OPIUM MENACE FACES COAST

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—Federal enforcement of laws against importation of narcotics into the United States is perilously near a breakdown.

And Southern California, vitally interested, together with the remainder of the Pacific Coast, today is facing the menace of a bumper crop of opium, now reported being harvested in Manchukuo, China, the province controlled by Japan.

Because of lack of funds, due to drastic slashes in appropriations at Washington, the pitifully few local agents, whose territory extends from San Luis Obispo on the north to the Mexican border, are practically marking time.

With traveling expenses reduced almost to the vanishing point, with wholly inadequate funds to pay increases, the department heads and agents can do little but hope Director of the Budget Lewis W. Douglas will sanction increased appropriation for this vitally important work.

Narcotics Commissioner H. J. Anslinger will appear next month before Douglas and urge that the appropriations for next year be $1,100,000, or an increase of $100,000.

Veteran Woman Skipper Ready for All Comers

CINCINNATI, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—A woman who skippers a packet boat and likes it best when a race is involved, formally challenged any comparable packet in the United States today to whip her speedy Tom Greene in a race on the Ohio River next May.

With the old rival, Betsy Ann thoroughly whipped, there apparently isn't any competition left on the Ohio, and Capt. Mary feels the river racing crown is becoming dusty from disuse.

So, going further afield, she sent out a challenge to all comers through William A. A. Castellini, of Cincinnati, who managed the last race between the Tom Greene and the Betsy Ann.

A committee of distinguished men and women interested in developing the recreational side of river life will serve in arranging for the race. A cash prize and a suitable trophy will be presented the winner.

Capt. Mary may pilot the Tom Greene herself. She was aboard in 1930 when her boat whipped the Betsy Ann, after winning in 1928 and 1929 with a sister craft the Chris Greene.

Capt. Mary got her pilot's license 43 years ago, shortly after her marriage to Capt. Gordon Greene, and has lived afloat almost continuously since.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 7.—(Universal.)—Sally Rand, the girl who stole Chicago's Century of Progress limelight with her ostrich plumes and daring dance rhythm, arrived yesterday to fulfill a movie contract.

Sally's return to the film city was in dramatic contrast with her departure. Named a Wampas Baby star in 1927, she went into a quick eclipse and left Hollywood admittedly broke and discouraged.

Letter for Girl Friend Reveals Youth as Thief

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Charles Stein, 22, formerly of Lawrenceburg, Ind., didn't want his girl friend to know—but she probably will find out now.

Stein was arrested here and police said they found a letter on him yesterday addressed to a girl in Marion, Ind. It was marked "to be mailed only in case of death or serious accident." It said:

"When you read this letter I'll be either dead or dying, but I want you to know that I loved only you when I was living.

"Here is something that is going to startle you. I never had nerve enough to tell you, as I knew a girl like you would never love me when she knew I am a thief and a regula robber. I have always carried a gun when I was not at home or near you."

Stein told police he was sent to the Indiana Reform School when he was 14 years old for attempting to rob a grocery store and had served time in a penal farm and a Wyoming state institution. Two charges of robbery here and two at Decatur, Ill., were lodged against him.

The youth was arrested after a tussle with a detective squad on the West Side. They said he possessed a half dozen guns, two of which had been taken along with badges and blackjacks from two Decatur policemen.

or for fraud, felony or breach of the peace.

VOTE BOARDS FREE

The order was that no member of an election board might be arrested or brought to court during the day. State Senator James J. Coyne, a spectator in the courtroom, greeted the order with a smile of satisfaction.

Judge Evans explained:

"We are sitting as committing magistrates only. We have no right to instruct the election boards as to their duties. We do not have the right to bring the boards in, thus holding up the election, merely to tell them how to perform the duties to which they were elected."

Before the voters was the task of choosing a Mayor, five city Councilmen, three judges of Common Pleas Court, two judges of County Court, one judge of Orphans' Court, a judge of the newly-created Juvenile Court, Sheriff, Coroner, Poor Director, County Surveyor, and two Jury Commissioners.

In many boroughs and townships there were hard-fought battles for local offices.

Besides the candidates on which there was balloting, 12 constitutional amendments were to be decided, whether Pennsylvania would vote to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, and the attitude of each city, borough and township as to whether it would modify the Blue Laws to permit baseball and football.

It was considered a certainty that returns would be late, even in the case of the most efficient election boards. Democrats have pleaded with their followers to make crosses after each candidate's name, and there was prospect of an unusual percentage of split tickets. To this huge task was added the problem of counting three other ballots.

Mayor John S. Herron, Republican candidate to retain his office, said the city police had been instructed to enforce the law, but he welcomed the coming of the state police.

The Elections Bureau will be open all night for the reception of ballot boxes, and a court order has been issued requiring boards to return the boxes as soon as the count is completed. The prothonotary's office will remain open for the reception of return sheets, which election officials will be expected to deposit as soon as they have been given receipts for their boxes. In this way it is hoped to avoid the delay of returns, a practice which has opened the way for frauds in past contests.

BI-PARTISAN COMMITTEE

A bi-partisan committee of three Republican and three Democratic lawyers sat in the Courthouse to advise any citizen who felt he had been unfairly dealt with at the polls. Judges of the Common Pleas Court were on the bench at 8 a. m. and planned to sit far into the night to act on complaints which might be received after the polls were closed.

Democratic leaders advised their followers to guard ballot boxes closely and to follow them from the polling places to the Court House to see that no detours occurred during which a box might be tampered with.

Both sides expressed a complete confidence in the outcome of the election. Mayor Herron, Republican, after closing his fight for votes with a final radio address last night, said:

"I am happy at the prospects for success today. We have conducted a clean, dignified campaign under the most trying circumstances and we feel confident that we will have a splendid majority as our staunch and true friends go to the polls tomorrow to record their approval of a record made.

"I am sure that I will conduct myself as Mayor so as to satisfy the most skeptical that I am the Mayor in every sense of the word and anxious to serve all of the people."

M'NAIR SEES VICTORY

Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence and William N. McNair, Democratic mayoralty nominee, also addressed final appeals to voters over the air. McNair predicted:

"We shall win today in the same decisive manner that Franklin D. Roosevelt won last year.

"The best evidence of the approaching victory is the eleventh-hour desperation of the Republican machine.

"Too late have they awakened to the fact that the people have made up their minds to get rid of the Mellon-Coyne-Herron machine and re-establish representative government in City Hall."

CHEATERS WARNED

A warning to election cheaters was also issued from Democratic headquarters by Cornelius D. Scully, chairman of the McNair campaign committee. Scully advised that the Democratic party would bring all forces of the law to the investigation and prosecution of every violation of election laws reported to it. He said:

"To those election officials who might be in league with those who are planning to steal the election, I want to give notice that each and every violation of the election laws that comes to the attention of the Democratic party will be investigated and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

"Not only will the state authorities be called upon to punish election crooks, but inasmuch as this election also comes within the jurisdiction of the federal authorities, the power of the United States government has been assured in rounding up and prosecuting all those responsible for dishonest returns."

Violence and Disorders Reported in Election

As the city and county voted today, Judges in Common Pleas Court were busy sifting stories of chicanery, and early in the day instances of violence came to light.

Robert Helfry, of 1513 Federal street, Republican nominee for alderman in the Twenty-fifth Ward, reported that he had been struck in the face in front of the polling place at Federal and Henderson streets.

Police arrested Harry Gaut, a Negro, 40, of 42 Lane way, in connection with Helfry's complaint.

In Rankin, Martin Riordan, of 335 Second street, said political enemies had hurled bricks through his windows. He is Democratic chairman in the borough.

Judges Elder W. Marshall and Samuel H. Gardner sat from 8 o'clock on to hear complaints.

BRADDOCK COMPLAINT

A delegation from Braddock informed them that Independent voters were being challenged en masse in the First and Second districts of the Second Ward, Braddock, and that in the Second District of the Second Ward tax receipts were not being accepted. It was also charged sample ballots had been destroyed in those districts.

The judges promised to see that the election boards in those districts behaved.

From the Magee Hospital it was reported that nurses had been chased from the polling place at 2130 Fifth avenue, First District, Fourth Ward. They appealed to the emergency elections committee and were finally permitted to return to root for the hospital aid amendment.

Attorney Francis P. Anton told Judge Gardner that in the First District of the First Ward, Rankin, shots had been fired from windows near the polling place to frighten away timid voters.

From the Ninth District of the Eighth Ward came a complaint that names had been added to the voting lists. John Morrow, registration commissioner, secretary, was called and explained two had been added which had previously been omitted through a clerical error. The court gave its sanction to the action.

From the Twelfth District of the Fourth Ward came Joseph Lohle, overseer, with the complaint that he had not been allowed to serve. He had found, Lohle alleged, William Weaver sitting as judge and had challenged him on the grounds he is an employe of the state inheritance tax office.

POLICE CALLED

Police were called and overruled him, Lohle said. Judge Marshall instructed him to make an information against members of the board.

Overseers from the Eighth District of the Twenty-seventh Ward complained they had been barred from the polls. A similar complaint came from John R. Verlinick, minority inspector in the First District of the Second Ward, McKees Rocks.

Judge Marshall had his clerk call both boards and admonish them.

In the Seventh District of the Third Ward, Judge Marshall was informed, city employes were assisting voters without affidavits of illiteracy. Judge Marshall suggested that informations be made against the alleged offenders.

OFFICIAL FINED

Timothy Buckley, judge of elections in the Eighth District of the Twenty-seventh Ward, was fined $10 for contempt when the court was told he had refused to recognize Charles Demko, elections overseer. Buckley didn't have the $10, but a friend gave the court a check for his fine.

Patrolman Frank Tabasco, haled to court from the First District of the Thirty-first Ward and accused of intimidating voters, was dismissed after Democratic accusers had failed to make a case against him.

BROADWAY GAY AS 'CAMEL' DIES

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Thirteen years ago Broadway saw John Barleycorn pass on and paid not much attention.

Tonight he will be welcomed back, even though he won't arrive officially until next month.

With the coincidence of New York's mayoralty election (a holiday anyway) and the voting of six states on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, plans were laid for a night of hilarity along the "Main Stem."

Cabarets, hotels, restaurants and night clubs prepared for a record celebration, although none had scheduled formal events marking the death knell of prohibition.

Virtually every public gathering place in the entertainment and bright light sector planned to announce election returns and assist revellers in celebrating the doom of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Four Face Arrest In Election Fraud

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Warrants for the arrest of a woman and three men on charges of fraudulent registration were issued by a magistrate yesterday upon request of the Registration Commission.

The warrants named James and Florence Logue, John J. Joyce and Albert Rothman. The commission said none lived at the registered address.

HERRON LAYS FALSITIES TO M'NAIR

Declaring that William N. McNair, Democratic candidate for Mayor, has permitted the use of false statements regarding Pittsburgh city government in his campaign, Mayor John S. Herron predicted an overwhelming victory for the entire Republican ticket at the polls today.

Speaking last night over radio station WCAE, Mayor Herron declared that Pittsburgh is the best governed city in the United States.

He discussed one by one arguments used by McNair during the campaign, declaring that many of them were only partly true and some of them absolutely false.

ASSAILS M'NAIR

Regarding the McNair statements, he said:

"If he and his speakers deliberately endeavor to befuddle the minds of the public with such inaccuracies before an election, could you imagine what sort of inaccuracy could be depended upon when he is safely in office for a term of four years?

"I shudder to think of such a catastrophe and feel that our people will respond in no uncertain terms."

Referring to the charge of political use of the welfare bond issue money, Herron said:

"I shall let you be the judge, when I tell you that I have in the files of my office a communication from the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Association which advised me that their records show that of the total number of men employed on this work, approximately 30 per cent were from those who had been receiving help from this welfare fund and urging that this percentage be increased if possible. In other words, by taking these men off the welfare lists, we have reduced the charges against that fund and were rehabilitating these men by making them able to sustain themselves and their families without additional aid.

NEEDED WORK

"On the other hand, I call your attention to the fact that the remaining 70 per cent were all men, who, while they managed to keep themselves off the relief lists, were yet in desperate need of employment—small property owners, men who had never been obliged to perform manual labor—men who were actually begging for a chance to secure a few days work a week in order that they might retain their self-respect and aid their loved ones.

"Should this sort of citizen be informed that nothing could be done for him until he had reached the stage where sheer desperation obliged him to apply for public aims."

Herron pointed to the reductions which have been negotiated in the garbage and rubbish costs. He also pointed to substantial taxes paid by public utilities and to approximately $400,000 in beer license levies to refute statements made by McNair in a Chicago speech that those sources were not producing revenue.

Women Drys Firm On Renewing Fight

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—As six states balloting today "sounded the knell of national prohibition," leaders of the W. C. T. U. pledged to renew the fight for prohibition. Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, state president of the union, said:

"We will renew the fight, appealing to the young people through the churches and schools.""

6 STATES VOTE ON REPEAL ISSUE

WETS SEE VICTORY

Wet organization leaders forecast anti-Prohibition majorities in at least three of the six states voting, all that is necessary to assure elimination of the Eighteenth Amendment from the Constitution—while dry organization captains said there were good chances for halting the hitherto unbroken wet parade.

Although voters express themselves today, actual repeal could not materialize until the first week in December. The ballots elect delegates to state conventions which, December 5 or 6, will ratify or reject a new constitutional amendment repealing the Eighteenth.

Repealists looked chiefly to Pennsylvania, Kentucky and South Carolina to join the 33 states which already have approved repeal by 11,329,190 to 3,735,657 popular vote. They also conceded little doubt about North Carolina and Ohio, but were not so sure of Utah.

Dry forces claimed a big vote would be polled in Pennsylvania, but the repealers expected a two-to-one majority.

South Carolna touched off its last campaign day with a controversy between wets and drys over whether women must have poll tax receipts.

Phohibition leaders in the homeland of the dry cause—Ohio—held there was a good chance of a dry victory if the state's citizenry turned out in full strength. The Ohio Repeal Council predicted a three-to-one decision for the wets.

North Carolina's voting held a double interest in that two tickets were offered. On one the voter says whether he favors calling a convention to act on repeal and on the other he chooses between wet and dry delegates to the convention. If a majority is against a convention none can be held.

Both wets and drys conceded Utah's two largest cities—Salt Lake City and Ogden—would go for repeal, but prohibition lieutenants looked to the rural areas for victory.

In Kentucky, both the Democratic and Republican state parties were pledged to repeal, leading to forecast that the commonwealth would be wet by a good majority.

Pennsylvania Repealists See 2-to-1 Victory

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—While dry forces claim they will poll a large vote, their opponents predict that Pennsylvania in today's election will favor repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment by at least two-to-one.

The cities are arrayed against the rural sections in the contest for the election of 15 delegates-at-large to a convention to be held December 5.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot, long an ardent leader of Pennsylvania drys, has taken no part in the fight against the Eighteenth Amendment, he has been making plans for liquor control.

Headed by John A. McSparran, state secretary of agriculture, the committee of nine on prohibition emegencies in a statement last night said that "last-minute reports from chairmen in 60 counties where the drys have active county committees, indicate that an enormous dry vote will be polled."

The present state enforcement act is based on the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act and, in event of national repeal, will be invalid.

Gov. Pinchot and Republican leaders are seeking agreements to enable a special session of the Legislature opening next Monday to set up a new liquor control act by December 5.

Fate of State's Blue Law Hinges On Today's Vote

The yellowed, musty page that forbids athletic sports on the Sabbath is the one where thumbing has stopped this time. Cities and towns are deciding for themselves whether they shall license football and baseball on Sunday afternoons.

"Times have changed!" is the cry of those who would take advantage of the Schwartz act, signed by the Governor last spring and allowing communities to decide on liberalization of their Sabbath.

Friends of the blue law, watching the thinning set of statutes, point with pride, however, to the fact that the law never has been amended.

Parts have been repealed and there have been many court attacks since the law first was written by sturdy founders of the commonwealth. But the blue law stands!

Written when the state was very young—1794—the law covered everything that could happen on a Sunday. Stores were closed, gaming was taboo, you couldn't shave, nor could you shovel snow. Only in recent years was marriage lifted from the ban.

But that wasn't half of it. Listen:

A sturdy youth and a winsome maid paused in their Sunday wanderings over a leafy mountain road.

He asked shyly:

"Wilt thou marry me?"

Blushing, she murmured:

"Yes."

But it was against the law! So he had to propose another day.

A restless state protested "times have changed!" and the echo has been heard in legislative halls and courtrooms ever since.

In 1805 the law was changed to permit the purchase of "necessities of life" in Philadelphia.

The law was tightened in 1855, increasing penalties for violations in Allegheny County from $4 or six days in the bastile to $25 or 10 to 30 days in jail.

In May, 1864, an attack on the blue laws brought a permit to deliver milk in Allegheny County between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

These court decisions broadened the acts:

An opinion held that it was legal to sweep snow off railroad tracks on Sunday.

But another held that shaving is "not a work of necessity unless necessary to the health of the patron."

In 1867 a court held the operation of railroad trains was legal and in 1901 it was decided the operation of trolley cars also was within the law.

In 1850 it was ruled "a marriage is not void because celebrated on Sunday," and in 1882: "An engagement to marry, made on Sunday, is not such worldly business as is prohibited by this act and is valid."

In 1915 the courts held that baseball is a "sport and diversion" in violation of this act. This is the attack that resulted in the Schwartz bill.

Blue law advocates are prepared to face further onslaughts; just what part of the book, they're not sure. There are many parts wholly unknown to the average Pennsylvanian.

For instance:

What was it you said that day you socked your thumb with a hammer? And what did you shout that dark night Junior left his roller skate on the cellar stairs? Ah-ha-a-a-a-a!

That was against the law!

MILLIONS CAST BALLOTS IN PENNA.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—With a potential vote of 4,000,000 throughout the state, Pennsylvanians went to the polls today to settle issues ranging from prohibition repeal to modification of the 1794 Blue Law.

In addition there are 12 constitutional amendments, three of them revolving around $85,000,000 bond issues, to be acted upon and 335 communities are deciding whether 3.2 beer and wines may be sold by retailers to drink on the spot.

LOCAL OPTION

The vote to modify the 139-year-old Blue Laws, though taken in every municipality outside of Huntingdon County, is a matter of local option.

The ballots will be counted separately in each of the 2,504 cities, boroughs and townships. Each municipality is deciding for itself whether local officials may license baseball and football games between the hours of 2 and 6 o'clock Sunday afternoons.

An injunction granted to the Huntingdon County Sabbath School Association prevents a vote in that county.

Of the 12 constitutional amendments, that providing a $25,000,000 bond issue for state expenses will have the greatest immediate effect. The 1933 Legislature set aside $20,000,000 of the proceeds for unemployment relief and $5,000,000 for state-aided hospitals and colleges.

PINCHOT CAMPAIGN

Gov. Pinchot, who has campaigned through the state for "Amendment No. 8," as it appears on the ballot, is withholding his formal call for the special session until the fate of this amendment is known. He contends that, if it is defeated, the special session must raise money for relief by new taxes.

Other amendments provide:

Fifty million dollar bond issue for bonuses to veterans of the Spanish-American, Boxer rebellion, Philippines and World wars.

Ten million dollar bond issue for purchase of toll bridges.

Increased borrowing capacity for counties.

Elimination of tax payment as a qualification for voting.

Machinery for allowing Allegheny County voters to set up a "Greater Pittsburgh."

There are some lively municipal contests, but state political leaders are interested chiefly on the bearing these will have on next year's gubernatorial contests.

CLEVELAND POLL FIGHT IN COURT

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Cleveland approached today's mayoralty election in a spirit of bitterness engendered by a day of verbal violence and legal contortions.

The battle swept from the rostrum to the courts and back again yesterday in a swift march of events affecting the political fortunes of Mayor Ray Miller, the incumbent Democrat seeking re-election, and Harry L. Davis, the Republican, who three times has held the office of Mayor and once that of Governor.

Center of the maneuvering was a wrangle among the membership of the Elections Board over what was advertised as an attempt to challenge the right of several thousand voters to cast their ballots, on the charge of false registration.

Judge Alva R. Corlett ordered the Board of Elections to make no sweeping challenge at the polls. Republicans asserted the Democrats had sought to "steal" the election by depriving Republicans of their franchise.

COUZENS, FORD SCIONS RUNNING

DETROIT, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Frank Couzens, 31-year-old son of United States Senator James Couzens, sought election as mayor of Detroit, in today's election, over Philip Breitmeyer, 69-year-old former mayor of the city.

A second cousin of Henry Ford was seeking re-election as mayor of suburban Dearborn today against a rival whose avowed purpose is to end what he considers the domination of the Ford Motor Company in Dearborn politics.

The candidates were Mayor Clyde M. Ford, chief executive of Dearborn, since 1928, and David Jones, national vice president of the Automobile Workers' Union and a former organizer for the American Federation of Labor. Jones claims he has the suport of the workers in his candidacy.

VIOLENCE RAGES IN NEW YORK ELECTIONS

The fiery LaGuardia speeded to the Harlem voting place on receipt of a telephone call of trouble there.

Entering the place, he ripped Tammany badges from loiterers and ordered them out, asserting:

"I know who you are—you're thugs."

The crowd fell back, but the Tammany captain almost precipitated trouble when he started for LaGuardia. Party emblems are forbidden by law in polling places.

Assemblyman F. J. Hackenburg telephoned Chief Police Inspector John O'Brien from Fusion headquarters that a request for troops would be forwarded to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman unless widespread disorders were quelled.

A police alarm was sent out in Brooklyn for a club-using squad of thugs who stabbed George Bennett, a worker for Candidate Joseph V. McKee and manhandled workers and watchers at various polling booths.

Added to an increasing number of arrests for illegal registration was the entire election board of the Twenty-ninth Election District, which was jailed on charges of permitting votes to be cast by persons allegedly unqualified.

Blackjacks swung on Fusion watchers on the Lower East Side, felled William R. Covington, a special deputy attorney general detailed to election fraud investigations. A gang fight took place in another polling place on the East Side.

CHADBOURNE ARRESTED

The Fusion campaign manager, William Chadbourne, was arrested on a charge of assault preferred by a Democratic worker as result of a fracas at a polling place in the Twenty-second Election District. It grew out of Chadbourne's demand for a police officer to arrest two election board members, and the officer's refusal.

The Fusion threat to ask for troops grew out of a riot participated in by about 200 persons at a polling place over charges of "repeating" by Fusion and Tammany workers.

Chadbourne was taken to Tombs Court.

Nearly 40 per cent of the registered vote in Manhattan and the Bronx had been cast by noon, with the early morning rush to the polls well sustained.

OHIO ROLLS UP BIG VOTE

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—With overcast skies such as frequently keep thousands from voting, Ohio today decided whether the 15-year-old ban on hard liquor should be lifted.

Rain fell in some sections, light snows were reported in others, and fog and mist cast a cloud over some regions as Ohioans turned out in what election officials said was near unprecedented numbers for an off-year ballot casting.

Numerous bitter fights over local issues attracted voters who otherwise might not have ventured out. Owners of tangible property were intensely interested in a proposal to cut from 15 to 10 mills the tax limitation on real estate.

In the midst of the balloting came word that President Roosevelt had his eye on two issues before the voters. In addition to watching the state's verdict on his appeal for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, the President informed M. L. Brown, secretary of the Ohio Old Age Pension Conference:

Polls Slaying Marks Kentucky Election

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Bloodshed marked balloting here today in the bitterly contested municipal races when an unidentified Negro was shot to death in a quarrel near a voting booth.

He was a party worker.

Pinchots Cast Votes At Red Schoolhouse

MILFORD, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Gov. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot voted early today and the chief executive left soon afterward for Harrisburg.

MISS SARAH THOMPSON

Dormont Pair Rate 100 and 99 Per Cent in Course

Rivals in high school for scholastic honors, two Dormont girls have continued their leadership efforts at Allegheny College, where they are freshmen.

This was considered so unusual a grade that President William Pearson Tolley, head of the school, wrote a letter to Sarah's parents commenting on the fact.

Runner-up in the examination was Ruth McKibben, Miss Thompson's roommate, with a score of 99 correct answers. Last June the situation was reversed, for then Miss McKibben was graduated from Dormont high school with first honors, with Miss Thompson second.

Both have been pledged Kappa Kappa Gamma.

MISS RUTH M'KIBBEN

N. KENSINGTON PICKING MAYOR

A detail of state police guarded the polls in New Kensington today, when trouble arose over the first election under a third-class city form of government.

New Kensington emerges from its borough status January 1 as result of a referendum of the people. Particular interest has therefore been aroused in all offices concerned.

Chief attention is centered around the mayoralty office, for which Daniel Burns, incumbent burgess and Republican nominee; Col. D. O. Thomas, Democrat, and Dr. R. A. Wolfe, New Deal, are running.

VAN DYKE ASKS FAIR COUNT

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—Confident that "an honest count of ballots will insure Democratic victories," Warren Van Dyke, Democratic state chairman, urged voters to watch election boards for irregularities today.

He warned:

'Report any evidence of fraud or other irregularities immediately to the United States District Attorney in your district.

"The election of delegates to a constitutional convention to amend the Constitution of the United States makes election law violators liable to federal prosecution."

Reports from polls throughout the state indicate Democratic lines are holding firmly, the state leader asserted.

MICHIGAN CALLS REPEAL SESSION

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Gov. Comstock today ordered the Legislature to convene in special session at noon November 22 to give Michigann a liquor control law for use after the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed, and to speed up the state public works program.

In addition to liquor control and public works financing, the Legislature will be asked to consider changes in the banking laws, appropriations for one or two commissions and possible amendments to the old age pension act.

Watcher Closes Polls While Judge Eats

The judge of elections in the Fourth District, Thirteenth Ward polling place at Lang avenue and Hermitage street, went home to eat lunch today and a watcher ordered the polls closed, it was reported to election bureau.

And the watcher, according to law, was right. For the law provides the judge cannot leave while the polls are open.

BURGESS GETS DEATH THREAT

International News Service.

BLAIRSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 7.—Burgess G. C. Overdorff, prominent lumber dealer and Blairsville Burgess for the last eight years, today revealed he had received an anonymous threat of death in the event of his re-election to his present post.

The letter was written on a piece of cheap stationery, heavily bordered in black, and signed "Once a Friend," under a melodramatic skull and cross-bones drawing.

The note read:

"If you are elected November 7 you will never take office. Warning!"

Burgess Overdorff said he felt not the slightest concern over the threat. He is running on both the Democratic and Republican tickets against Reuben Einstein, prominent Blairsville merchant, who is running on the Socialist-Prohibition slate.

State police are investigating.

'EDGE' URGED FOR VOTERS

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Richard J. Beamish, Secretary of the Commonwealth, said today that any "fair" election board would interpret the election laws "liberally" to give all voters "legitimately" in line at the close of the polls an opportunity to vote.

A complaint from Lancaster County that polls there probably would be too small to accomodate all of the voters expected to be waiting at 7 p. m., brought the statement from Beamish.

He added that under the law as many persons as are "within the inclosure" at the polling place at the official closing time are permitted to vote.

His "liberal" interpretation of the provision would permit those persons in line but unable to enter the polling place to vote.

FROM MAINE TO FLORIDA!

VOTERS THRONG POLLS IN PHILA.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—A heavy rush of voters was reported from all sections of Philadelphia today. In some places it was the heaviest in years, men and women standing in long lines waiting to vote.

Most of them were workers who decided to vote early and avoid the rush of the closing hours.

About the polling places were many persons interested in bringing out the vote for this or that. Members of the American Legion were asking voters to favor the soldiers' bonus (amendment No. 4); others were making appeals for No. 8, the $25,000,000 relief amendment.

Then there were the advocates of Sunday sports handing out circulars to citizens. The repealists and anti-repealists were out in force.

Baby Girl, Election Eve Gift to Candidate

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Birth of a fourth daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Neville Miller was announced yesterday, on the eve of today's election in which Mr. Miller is seeking election as Mayor of Louisville on the Democratic ticket. The Millers have three other children, all girls.

MILLER URGES METRO PLAN

A final plea for passage of Amendment No. 11 at the polls today was made by Joseph T. Miller, chairman of the Metropolitan Plan Committee.

Pointing out that the voters' approval of the issue decides nothing finally, but merely facilitates a future vote on a consolidated form of county government, Miller said the previous charter drafted by the Metropolitan Commission has met with world-wide favor.

Passage of the amendment would permit the Legislature, or a Metropolitan Commission appointed by Legislature, to draft a tentative charter for a Metropolitan Pittsburgh.

M'CLURE SHUNS POLLS FOR TRIAL

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Frank J. Stackhouse, 70-year-old proprietor of the Chadds Ford Inn, at Chadds Ford, testified in Federal Court today that he paid more than $8,000 to the alleged Delaware County "protection" organization so that he might sell "high powered" beer.

He said he paid the money to Andy Frank and John J. Ryan, two of the 74 defendants on trial with State Senator John J. McClure on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

McClure, Republican organization leader of the county, is spending the day in court instead of directing the election forces of his party. Judge George A. Welsh, presiding, refused to permit jurors and defendants to vote because the trial is in its sixth week and the end is not in sight.

Stackhouse testified Ryan and Frank called on him shortly after he received a subpena to appear before the federal grand jury last June. He said:

"They told me to be careful what I said and not to talk too much."

Advice to BRIDES

Be careful how you spend his money, my dear, or you'll have troubles on your hands and they won't be little ones.

As a customer of Harris', with your little budget book, you KNOW every day, every hour HOW MUCH you've paid and HOW MUCH you owe. And if you think that isn't important, just run up a bill somewhere and see.

Advice to GROOMS

Right after the honeymoon have a talk with the missus, and get the family budget lined up properly. Show her WHY it's money in your pocket if she buys her clothes at Harris', just as you do. Explain to her that budgeting is the essence of the Harris set-up; that small amounts, paid regularly, cannot lead her into the morass of debt.

Due to our Low Expense and Highly Specialized Form of Operation, the use of our Extended Charge Account costs you Not One Cent beyond our Regular Cash Prices.

GUARANTEE: If merchandise of Harris quality can be bought for less than Harris prices, it's your money back!

$500,000 ASKED IN LOVE THEFT

International News Service.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 7.—How William G. Wilson, Cleveland insurance man is said to have turned the pretty head of Mrs. Presley W. Pitts, wife of a Mount Vernon publisher's agent, by introducing her to the Prince of Wales, Edna Ferber, Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyons, will be told in Supreme Court here by her husband shortly.

Pitts is suing the millionaire member of Cleveland uplifting societies for $500,000 for alienation of affections, it was revealed, when Justice William G. Bleakley signed an order permitting the celebrities, a hotel clerk, a house detective and a photographer to be proxy witnesses in the suit.

He charges that Wilson took his wife to French Lick, Ind., New York, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Douglaston, L. I., in the course of his theft of her love. Finally, last July, Pitts alleges Mrs. Pitts went to Europe on the Ile de France, and Wilson did, too. It was on shipboard that Wilson is said to have introduced Mrs. Pitts to the celebrities.

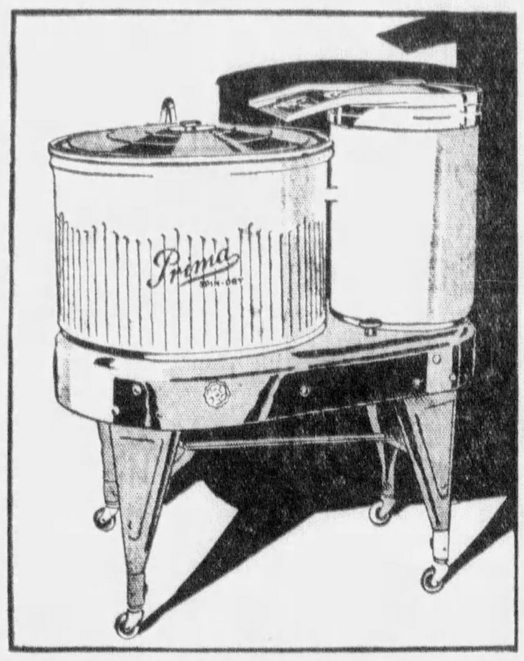
Spin-Dry Washer



Washes Blues Rinses Dries

All you do is drop in the clothes and take them out when they are partially dry! You need not carry buckets and buckets of water because the ultra-modern Prima Spin-Dry electric washer with its powerful electric pump and filler hose fills and empties the tubs.

No extra tubs are needed because you rinse and blue right in the washer. Wringers are unknown—and so are torn buttons and smashed hooks and snaps—the clothes are spun damp-dry right in the washer. And all this with the famous Prima guarantee. It's positively thrilling!—Come in and see it.

SOCIETY GIRL IN OPERA DEBUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—A New York society girl, Alice Tully, made her debut in American Grand Opera last night, amidst loud and long applause at the Hippodrome.

Miss Tully, a niece of former Ambassador Alanson Houghton, studied in Paris for six years and made her first concert appearance there in 1927.

Her appearance last night brought a good sprinkling of society people to Alfredo Salmaggi's Chicago Grand Opera Company. Within a few weeks she will return to Europe for an engagement with the Opera Comique in Paris.

INSULL VERDICT HELD 'FAIR'

International News Service.

ATHENS, Nov. 7.—After reviewing the decision of the Greek Supreme Court refusing the extradition of Samuel Insull, Minister of Justice Taliadouros handed an opinion today upholding the ruling.

Taliadouros stated the court's verdict appeared fair.

Complete records of the case of the former Chicago utilities magnate had been forwarded to the Justice Ministry on order of Premier Tsaldaris.

In upholding the court's refusal to extradite Taliadouros added one more blow to the attempt of the American State Department to return Insull to the United States to face fraudulent bankruptcy indictments.

The Greek press is almost as a unit in backing the action of the Greek court and the subsequent attitude taken by the Greek government, and in several instances has editorially chastised the United States for venturing to protest a decision of the highest court in Greece.

RHYTHME CLUB RAID HOLDS 2

Two alleged proprietors of the Rhythme Club, Saw Mill Run boulevard, were free on bond today after being held for court at a hearing yesterday before Alderman Thomas A. Flannigan on charges of violating the Snyder Act.

They are Lou Gettleson and Lew Joseph, of Shady avenue, arrested in a raid on the club late Saturday. Gettleson posted a bond of $2,500. Joseph, also charged with carrying concealed weapons, posted $3,500 bond.

Three women, held for questioning by county detectives, were released.

BRITAIN TO PAY TOKEN ON DEBT TO U. S.

tions was made today in Washington and London. In Washington, President Roosevelt issued a statement setting forth the situation. In London, Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, informed the House of Commons of the decision to continue the token method of payment.

In his statement, President Roosevelt said the currency negotiations have been conducted under great difficulty because of unprecedented state of world economic and financial conditions. Therefore, the discussions have been "adjourned" until commercial and monetary conditions become more clarified.

The British assured the United States they recognized the validity of the debt, and at the same time were given Mr. Roosevelt's "personal" assurance that he did not consider the British government in default for failing to meet the entire amount due in December.

The expectation is that Britain will continue to make "token" payments each installment date, in June and December, until such time as the conditions referred to by the President become more suited to permanent adjustment.

When that will be, no one cared to predict today.

ROOSEVELT STATEMENT

The President's statement follows:

"For some weeks representatives of the British government have been conferring with representatives of this government on the subject of the British debt to this country growing out of the World War. The conversations were requested by the British government in its notes of last June and December, a request to which I gladly acceded in view of the policy which I announced in November, 1932, that a debtor may at any time approach a creditor with representations concerning the debt and ask for readjustment of the debt for its terms of payment.

"The conversations now concluded have in no sense prejudiced the position which either government has taken in the past or may take in any subsequent discussion of the entire debt question. They have, however, given an opportunity, for a full and frank discussion of the representations which the British government has made.

DIFFICULTIES CITED

"These discussions have made the great difficulty, if not impossibility, of reaching sound conclusions upon the amounts of international payments practicable over any considerable period of time in the face of the unprecedented state of world economic and financial conditions.

"It has, therefore, been concluded to adjourn the discussions until certain factors in the world situation—commercial and monetary—become more clarified. In the meantime, I have, as executive, noted the representations of the British government. I am also assured by that government that it continues to acknowledge the debt without, of course, prejudicing its right again to present the matter of its readjustment, and that on December 15, 1933, it will give tangible expression of this acknowledgment by the payment of seven and one-half million dollars in United States currency.

"In view of these representations, of the payment and of the impossibility, at this time, of passing finally and justly upon the request for a readjustment of the debt, I have no personal hesitation in saying that I shall not regard the British government as in default."

BRITAIN'S VIEW

The White House also made public Chamberlain's statement to the House of Commons, as follows:

"The discussions in regard to the war debts have been concluded.

"It has unfortunately not proved possible to reach an agreement for a final settlement. His Majesty's government recognized, however, the difficulties which exist at the present time by reason of the unsettled economic and financial situation and they have accordingly informed the United States government that they are prepared to make on December 15 next a further payment of seven and a half million dollars in American currency in acknowledgment of the debt pending a final settlement. His Majesty's government have stated that they are ready to resume negotiations on the general question whenever after consultation with the President it may appear that this can usefully be done.

"President Roosevelt is making a statement in Washington today in regard to the discussions."

Skull Found Here Believed That of French Soldier

Investigation by Dr. Davenport Booker, head of the anatomy department, University of Pittsburgh, of a skull found by excavators at the new postoffice site last week convinces him that it was the head of a French soldier, he reported yesterday. Dr. Booker believes the soldier served in the French and Indian War about 170 years ago.

BRITAIN QUITS TARIFF TRUCE

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Great Britain has given notice of intention to withdraw December 7 from the tariff truce initiated at the beginning of the World Economic Conference, Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, announced today.

The members of the House of Commons, where the announcement was made, cheered when Runciman declared the truce is of practical value no longer. Norman H. Davis, American roving ambassador, played a prominent part in framing the agreement, which was made effective coincident with the assembling of the economic parley last June.

In substantiation of his statement, Runciman pointed out that the truce since has been renounced by several nations, the Irish Free State, Switzerland, Sweden and the Netherlands, while reservations have been made by Denmark and France.

HITLER MENACE SEEN BY RABBI

If Hitler's program is carried to a conclusion it is bound to bring disaster, Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, of Rodef Shalom Temple, declared in an address to a group of Methodist Episcopal ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Building, Penn avenue, yesterday. He said in part:

"Germany will arise above the philosophy that is at present leading that nation to misunderstanding and general harm throughout the world. The entire Hitler program is based on a philosophy of racial nationalism."

REPORT HITLER SEEKING ARMS PARLEY

ROME, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—A letter from Chancellor Hitler of Germany handed today to Premier Mussolini was believed in well-informed circles to have contained a request that Il Duce convoke an arms conference of the big powers after next Sunday's German election.

The letter was presented by Hermann Wilhelm Goering, reich minister without portfolio, who arrived yesterday by airplane.

It was handed over during a long conversation between the two concerned with the next step to be taken to break the disarmament deadlock.

A communique issued following the conversation stated that Hitler's letter thanked Mussolini for the work he has done in favor of an equitable regulation of international relations and set forth Germany's viewpoint in regard to disarmament.

The political observers expressed the opinion that Hitler had asked Il Duce to take the initiative in convoking a conference because he is uneasy over the present deadlock.

It was noted, however, that the communique was not finished with the words which have become customary in most similar announcements, namely that the statesmen had found themselves in agreement. This was taken to indicate Mussolini and Goering had not reached an accord regarding disarmament.

It is known that Il Duce is personally much irritated over Hitlers' action in abandoning the Disarmament Conference, although he has advised all to remain calm.

Russian Defends Red At Reich Fire Trial

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Another witness from Moscow, Stojanka Iskrowa, testified in the German Reichstag Building fire trial today that Blagoi Popoff, one of three Bulgarians among the five defendants, lived in Moscow during the summer of 1932 and later was in a Crimean sanitarium.

This contradicted the testimony of German witnesses who claimed Popoff then lived in Germany.

Students Raise Nazi Banner in Vienna

VIENNA, Nov. 7. — (AP.) — A swastika banner unfurled from the university was removed with difficulty today by police wearing gas masks.

Nazi students, after hanging out the flag, released tear gas in the rooms through which it could be reached. There also were disturbances at the anatomical institute.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Jewish students were driven off the campus of the university here today by rioting Nazis.

FRENCH CABINET DOOM SEEN

PARIS, Nov. 7. — (AP.) — The overthrow of the cabinet of Premier Albert Sarraut shortly was said by party members to be certain as the result of a radical Socialist breach with the government this morning.

M. Daladier, whose cabinet fell recently, explained that the Socialists were responsible for the rupture, while M. Chautemps pledged the cabinet's party allegiance.

Economic Planning Talk at Y. W. C. A.

Miss Mary Van Kleeck will speak under the auspices of the League for Social Justice next Monday night, in the auditorium of the Central Y. W. C. A., 59 Chatham street, on "Economic Planning and the Workers' Standard of Living."

Miss Van Kleeck is director of industrial study for the Russell Sage Foundation and the author of several books on industrial relations, and has edited a number of books on subjects relating to industry.

HITLER FORCED DOWN, UNHURT

Universal Service.

BERLIN, Nov. 7. — Chancellor Hitler ran into trouble last night on his flying election campaign for the first time.

Flying to Kiel to address a Nazi election demonstration, the Chancellor's private plane was forced down at Travemuende in a emergency landing. Hitler was not hurt.

The Chancellor proceeded by automobile to Kiel and made his address.

Foreign Minister Von Neurath, taking part in the campaign to weld popular support for Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations, spoke at the Deutscher club here and assailed the League as the "instrument of the victor powers" of the World War to enforce the Versailles treaty.

LEAGUE SEEKS TAX FIGHT AID

Seeking relief for real estate taxpayers from the school tax burden, the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners and Taxpayers League has called upon the Tax Justice League of Pennsylvania to join its fight.

Co-operation is asked in a request to the governor "to include in his call for the special session, provisions that will make it possible for the legislature to consider ways and means to provide revenue, whether from liquor or any other source, to at least give real estate the benefit of paying but its just portion."

Real estate in Pennsylvania, the league points out, comprises only 25 per cent of the total wealth, and taxes on it should not exceed that share in meeting the cost of education.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion.

EXPERT HAILS STORY-TELLING PAINTINGS

By PENELOPE REDD

Dr. Frank Jewett Mather counseled a tolerant approach to the contemplation of painting in his lecture on the current Carnegie International at Carnegie Music Hall last night. Said Mather:

Miss Redd

Not the old dull type, he qualified, but a new type invigorated by a mastery of design.

To make his conference explicit he divided artists into two types. The one as "an observer and reporter who discovers themes in nature and plucks out what interests him and then sits down and gives you what he sees. He is valuable," said Dr. Mather, "because he sees more precisely, more vividly than you and he enriches your every day experience."

Dr. Mather designated the second type as "the creator or constructor, who shows you something you could never see for yourself." Said the lecturer:

"He puts things together and gives you colors not close to nature but the way he feels."

PRAISES PRIZE WINNER

Of the many paintings which he discussed in detail, taking this distinction between the types of artists as his basis, Dr. Mather particularly praised the first Carnegie prize painting by Segonzac. He described it as a "rare picture, wonderfully modern, giving a sense of growth and vitality."

Alexander Kostellow's Carnegie Honorable Mention painting, "After Dinner," was also rated highly by Dr. Mather. He spoke of it as "beautifully concentrated, precise and exquisite, worked out in a strange idiom of his own, a queer reticent Jane Austen type." He went on:

"The mills outside indicated the solace for the hard life that was found within. There was no sense of inadequacy, even though the painting was far away from the average appearance. It is a very fine and a very promising picture."

STRESSES VITALITY

Anent the George Biddle harvest scene, Dr. Mather observed:

"Why is it right for an old master to be exuberant and all wrong for a modern in the minds of many?"

This quality expressed in the abstraction of the sense of growth and the vitality of the Biddle painting greatly appealed to Dr. Mather.

Prior to the meeting he took issue with the Daughters of the American Revolution, who last week protested the painting "Daughters of Revolution." He said:

"It isn't a very good picture, but it is excellent satire. Incidentally the subject is a very fitting one for satire. America has been made great by the people who came over in the last boat, more than by those who came in the Mayflower."

The lecture was the final one announced by Carnegie Institute in the series on the international.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

No Jewelry Unless Engaged

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My girl friend graduates from high school very soon. Would it be quite all right if I ask her permission to pay for her graduation ring? If she refuses, what would be a nice gift for her? I don't think she will go to college.

MATTHEW.

Unless you are engaged to this very young lady, it would not be in good taste for you to suggest that you give her this ring. You know, jewelry is taboo as a gift from a man to a girl, unless they are engaged. On the day of graduation, send her a lovely corsage, or a box of flowers. And then you might send her a handsomely-bound book, or a portfolio for her desk, with her name or initials or monogram on it, or a fine box of excellent letter paper, perhaps of varying and convenient sizes, or a photograph frame, or a fountain pen and pencil.

Regrets

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly send me the correct form of answer to use when sending "regrets" to an invitation to a church wedding? The following words are printed on the left-hand corner of the invitation: "Reception and dinner immediately following ceremony. Hotel Black. Please respond." L.

It is not necessary to acknowledge the invitation to the church ceremony. But it is most important, of course, to acknowledge the invitation to the reception and dinner. On the first page of a double-sheeted piece of letter-paper, write this acknowledgment:

Mr. and Mrs. John Latham regret that they are unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents') kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of November

When we send a regret, it is not necessary to repeat the hour given on the invitation.

OLSON COUNSEL QUITS CASE

Recently the district court dismissed the case by awarding judgment in favor of the defendant. Whether the case will be taken higher has not been announced.

Braddock Collector Bonded for $55,000

Thomas Howard, Braddock tax collector, has been bonded by the American Surety Company for $55,000 to cover the borough's outstanding 1933 tax duplicate.

Howard's removal from office was sought last week on the grounds that he had failed to post the bond required by law. A writ of mandamus was granted in Common Pleas Court to show why he shouldn't resign on a taxpayers' petition.

IDEAL FIGURE GOAL OF MODERN WOMEN —SAYS DOCTOR

New Reducing Method Explained by Prominent Physician Over Radio Station WCAE

"The modern woman loathes fat, but often takes the wrong road to lose it," said a well-known medical authority in his talk over WCAE recently. "Many of them trying dangerous drugs such as thyroid (which should only be taken under the direction of a competent physician) or drastic salts, actually damage their health. Others try the exhausting method of violent diets and exercises, which seldom give permanent results, but may lead to permanent injuries."

"Now Science," says this physician, "has come forward with a new discovery, Vannay, which contains no thyroid, no laxatives, no dangerous drugs. In fact, the Vannay method of weight control is so pleasant and certain that it has already been adopted by many thousands of women. Vannay, a convenient sugar-coated tablet, is a safe, natural regulator of the digestive ferments (Lipases), which control the production of fat in all human bodies.

"You don't have to starve yourself or go through painful exercises. You simply take the tablets each day and continue to eat three meals. The fat disappears at just the places where you want to lose it.

"It is possible now for the modern woman to get her weight at the ideal figure and easily reach it. This remarkable product is for sale at all May Drug Stores. Come into our store today and learn about Vannay. Ask for the booklet, "How To Reduce With Absolute Safety."

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop a Bayer Tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches bottom, it has started to disintegrate . . . What it does in this glass it does in your stomach. Hence its fast action.

Don't Forget real BAYER ASPIRIN starts "taking hold" of pain in few minutes

There is now a quicker way to ease pain. A way that often brings relief from even a severe headache or neuritis in a few minutes. Millions are now employing it . . . the fastest, safe relief, it is said, ever known for pain.

Those results are due to a scientific discovery by which a Bayer Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. A Bayer Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And thus is ready to go to work almost instantly. This unique Bayer discovery means quick relief from pain for you and yours. Fewer lost hours from headaches, neuralgia or the pains of rheumatism. And Safe Relief—for GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN does not harm the heart.

When you buy, though, see that you get the GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN. The best way is never ask for aspirin by the name "aspirin" alone. But if you want Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always to say "BAYER ASPIRIN."

Two bay leaves.

Wash and scrape the carrots, soak them in cold water half an hour. Put them in a kettle of boiling salt water and cook until tender, drain when dry, wash the carrots through a collander, put the sugar with a pint of water in a porcelain kettle, bring to boiling point and skim. Then add the carrot pulp, the grated yellow rind of lemon and oranges, the bay leaves and the ginger, and lastly the strained juice of lemon and oranges. Simmer genlly until it is consistency of orange marmalade. Put away in jelly tumblers.

DEVILED STEAK

Use as much round steak as desired. Lay on working board and pound it with steak beater on both sides. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cut in small portions and brown quickly in hot fat. Fry separately, onions and green peppers, when brown add to steak, then add one can tomato soup and one tablespoon vinegar. Simmer over slow fire for about an hour.

MRS. N. G. HAWES,
Cherry Tree, Indiana County, Pa.

BAKED HAM ENTREE

Place six slices pineapple in a buttered pudding dish. Cut three sweet potatoes, lengthwise, and cover pineapple. Add a third layer of three sliced apples topped with two ham slices. Pour over one-half cup water. Cook in a slow oven in a covered dish for two hours or until tender. Sprinkle the top with brown sugar, dot with bits of butter and return to the oven or broiler for browning. Sprinkle with parsley before serving.

LILLIAN M. NUSSKERN,
1413 Gardner street.

STUFFED PEPPERS A LA LEE

One cup ground ham or pork.
Two cups stale bread.
One cup chopped celery and onion together.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One egg.
One can tomatoe soup.
Six medium sized peppers.

Take crowns off peppers, seed and put in kettle. Cover with cold water. Slowly bring to a boil, remove from fire and drain (This removes any biter taste the peppers may have). Mix meat, stale bread, celery, onion and salt with egg. If not moist enough add one tablespoonful of rich milk or cream. Stuff peppers into bottom of the roaster, place three strips of bacon, lay on the peppers and bake in oven slowly for 15 minutes. Pour over peppers one can of tomatoe soup and one can of water. Bake for 45 minutes more or until tender.

HERE'S NEW HEALTH FOR YOUR LIVER
Now banish bad breath, pimples, constipation; feel like a million!

That tired, frowsy feeling in the morning, that "dark-brown" taste in the mouth—if you would banish them and win back buoyant health, don't expect relief from salts, mineral oil, or candy and chewing-gum laxatives.

For such remedies only move the bowels. While chances are, you're one of the thousands suffering from sluggish liver which does not yield sufficient bile—causing pimples, blemishes, headaches, bad breath and a general run-down feeling.

What you need is something which acts thoroughly but harmlessly upon the liver. And in Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets you will find that "something," which stimulates the bile flow.

A successful substitute for calomel, these famous tablets are compounded of pure vegetable ingredients, and have been praised for years by millions.

To get and keep the bile flowing freely—correcting constipation, skin troubles, and win back that "fine-and-dandy" feeling of youth—go to your druggist for Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets today. 15c, 30c, 60c.

GROWING DEAF WITH HEAD NOISES? TRY THIS

If you are growing hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who is threatened with Catarrhal Deafness or who has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

88 . . . 100 . . . 125 HORSEPOWER

And it's Twin Ignition valve-in-head horsepower—in every model! Only Nash has it! Two spark plugs ignite the gasoline in each cylinder—from opposite sides of the combustion chamber. The gasoline mixture burns faster and more thoroughly—with much more energy and much greater smoothness. Actual results are 22% more power, 5 miles an hour more top speed and 2 more miles from a gallon of gasoline than the same motor gives with single ignition!

COINCIDENTAL STARTER

All models have a Coincidental Starter. Not only saves time and effort, but conserves battery life. De-clutching to engage gear to put car in motion also starts the motor! Nash has overlooked nothing to increase Nash ease of operation. A touch of a finger shifts gears at any speed. All gears in the new Nash synchro-shift transmission are wide-faced, smooth-meshing, quiet helical gears—quiet in all speeds. Starting, steering, shifting, stopping, all are easier than ever. Brakes are wider and fully equalized. Steel and cast iron drums, with cooling fins, give positive, safe braking under all conditions. Two upward-action, positive gear-driven windshield wipers provide maximum vision at eye level. Double-action hydraulic shock absorbers are automatically and thermostatically controlled. Long, easy-riding springs are encased in metal covers, keeping them well lubricated and quiet.

IN Nash showrooms from coast to coast a new motoring year begins today. The 1934 Nash is on display—three series, four wheelbases—all with Twin-Ignition valve-in-head motors!

1934 cars styled to be the most "easily recognized" cars on the street. Styled with a "Speedstream" distinctiveness new to America and new to the world. Action in every line and curve. They're beautiful; they're unforgettably smart!

1934 cars powered to make motoring a sport again. Powered to soar easily and swiftly up hard-pull grades that most cars "lug" up. Powered to "make time" on the highway, and to have power left when you've had all you want!

Nash has the answer for 1934. Nash has the style. Nash has the power. Nash has the luxury. And Nash perpetuates the practice of building cars that stay built.

BUILT-IN QUIET VENTILATION

Nash for 1934 has developed an improved type of built-in ventilation that is not only draftless, but also quiet, and provides unobstructed vision. Rear quarter windows pivot to direct air flow in any volume desired. In cold and stormy weather, a patented "Air Vent" in the front windows provides complete ventilation with absolute comfort. Nash ventilation furthermore eliminates wind-whistle and noise at any speed.

ADVANCED STYLE . . . LUXURY

1934 Nash body lines flow with a natural "Speedstream" grace from front to rear. An entirely new note in bonnet design is the Nash Marquee hood—which overlaps the radiator and joins snugly with the front-end grille. Embossed on hood and fenders are streaming Speed-lines. Strikingly new are streamlined parking lamps and tail lights built into the heavy roll-edge skirted fenders. A smart touch that's very unusual. Smartness with lots of "go" in it. Rare luxury invites you inside for the most comfortable ride of your life. Seats are wider than customary, and deeper. Unusually rich cushioning gives an atmosphere of elegance. A nice touch is the piped-trim at the doors and seams. The package compartment in the dash is probably the largest you've ever seen. And the instrument panel—with all instruments grouped in two great easily read clock-face dials—is a perfect beauty!

Woman Says Men Are Most Considerate Guests

Lady visitors—how about 'em?

If you're a housewife, which would you rather have as a week-end guest—a woman or a man?

Why am I asking? Listen!

Dear Miss Robinson:

Maybe you'll think I am crazy, or a traitor to my sex, or something—but I'm just ripe for starting a crusade.

I'm speaking in behalf of a whole host of other women who, I'm sure, will welcome a few remarks where they will do the most good.

It's about entertaining women guests. Why on earth is it that when women come to visit you, they're so nosey, and so fussy, and so—well, I guess you'd call it personal, if you get what I mean? Men aren't like that!

About two years ago I got married and moved to a new town. I got my first taste of how disagreeable Lady Visitors can be, when I moved there—into a new house and a new neighborhood. Of course, where I grew up we all knew each other and each other's business, and I sort of took it for granted that we did. So I didn't notice prying questions.

But in the place we went to, of course I was new. And the neighbors began to call—and to pry. They asked me the most personal questions. They wanted to know—politely, of course, but none the less exasperatingly—just how much I'd paid for everything, and what my husband did, and how much salary he earned, and how well we got along together, and if we ever quarreled—and a thousand other things that were none of their business.

HOME FRIENDS SAME

It nearly drove me crazy. I thought I had gotten into a dreadful place, and longed for the friends I had grown up with. They weren't like that, I told myself. I almost quarreled with one of my nosiest neighbors, before I found out how to tell a few fibs and put them off.

Well, I was delighted when some of the girls I grew up with said they were coming to visit me. But I was soon disillusioned. Twice, over week-ends, I entertained a "girl from home," first one, then another—and both of them were just as curious and snoopy as my new acquaintances. Neither of them was married, and I guess a married friend was a sort of curio.

INCONSIDERATE

Anyway, they asked me all sorts of prying, personal questions, and they were both selfish and inconsiderate in other ways, too. They had to have special breakfasts, cooked late. They splashed water all over the bathroom, and used great gobs of my cold cream, and helped themselves to expensive perfume that had been given to me.

They criticized my husband for not making more money, and—I hate to say it—I was glad when they went home.

On the other hand, several times my husband has entertained men from his office, and not one of them snooped or was fussy or turned up his nose at our house or our entertainment.

Do women have to be like that? And if so, why? Honestly, I'd like to blow them up! And I've heard other hostesses make the same wail! I think it's time somebody should say something.

CELIA.

Is that your experience with Lady Visitors, Stranger? Do they sniff and snoop and double your housework?

And are men model guests?

If so—why so?

Wives Should Keep in Touch With Business, Believes Fay King

STUDY SOMETHING THAT MAY HELP YOU IN A TIME OF NEED
BUSINESS COURSE
KEEP IN PRACTICE WITH YOUR TYPEWRITING AND SHORT-HAND!
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

After marriage, few business girls give further thought to their office or store work.

Yet it would be well for them to keep in touch with that work in which they excelled at the time of their marriage. One never knows what changes the years may bring. The time may come when they will find it necessary to return to business, and have forgotten all that they once knew.

Every wife who has the time and means should study some course that will be helpful in time of need.

There is nothing sadder than the woman who suddenly finds herself alone in the world with no knowledge that will help her to a position.

Story About Stolen Letter Fails to Impress Veritzen

My sensation of being a mouse under the paws of a malevolently playful cat strengthened decidedly, as Philip Veritzen asked me silkily if I had conjectured how he knew that I had met Avis Arlen at Patchogue. But once in a blue moon an unusually lucky mouse may get near enough to a hole to slip down it, and it was with vague hope of such escape in my mind that I answered mendaciously but sturdily.

"No, that is a mystery to me; but I am not surprised. Remember, the people who work for and with you consider you rather omnipotent."

"I'm not so sure of what you are thinking," he said, and there was that in his intonation which made me flush. "But it is quite important to me; so much so that I must risk incurring your grave displeasure by expressing a doubt concerning what you have told me."

Subconsciously I flung up my head with anger, then felt a miserable sense of hypocritical trickery come over me. But Mr. Veritzen apparently saw only my first reaction.

"Do not misunderstand me," he said. "I am sure you are telling me what you think is the truth. I do not doubt that Miss Arlen concocted the story of wishing to stage a reconciliation with Mary. Nevertheless—"

He paused, while I thought miserably of the way Hugh Grantland had constructed the "alibi for Avis."

"But," Philip Veritzen went on, "I am not so sure you are telling me the whole truth," he paused and then continued.

MADGE KEEPS WORD

"There is no use asking you, I see. You probably have given her a pledge to shield her. But I want you to know now that the next time I see her I am going to tax her with being responsible for the loss of—the theft, rather—of that letter from you telling me of this wedding, and which I never have received."

I had little heart for the defense of a girl whom I knew to be guilty, and whose attendance at Mary's wedding I vaguely dreaded, but I had given my word to Avis, so I mustered up the courage to pretend horrified incredulity.

"Oh, surely, you do not think that of her!" I exclaimed. "That would be too horrible!"

Mr. Veritzen gave me a long, shrewd glance, which left me a little cold.

"I had not thought from your attitude of last summer that you would consider this accusation of mine so horrible," he said quietly.

The reminder prodded me, but I was prepared for it, and I am sure he did not see me wince at it.

"I own that I disapproved of some of Miss Arlen's actions last summer," I said, "but that does not mean that I could believe her guilty of stealing a letter. However, it is not my affair. You must deal with the situation as you think best. I can only plead with you to remember that she is a young girl, and, I think, infatuated with Noel. I am sure you do not need my reminder that she is the daughter of your friend, and practically penniless except for the wages you give her."

RELENTLESS MAN

"Oh, she told you that, did she?" Mr. Veritzen retorted. "You are right. I need no reminder of those things. But you know also, I think, that were the girl my own daughter, I should not hesitate to tax her with this, or to punish her if I were convinced she were guilty."

I gave a little involuntary shudder, not so much in fear of what he might do to Avis—I really could not pump up much sympathy for the girl who so richly deserved punishment—but in memory of the cruel judgment he had pronounced upon his only son in Noel's college days when, for the sake of a girl's name, Noel had borne the suspicion of theft and been expelled from college for what later had proven to be the fault of his quondam friend, Jack Leslie.

Philip Veritzen was indeed relentless in judgment and in punishment, but I felt suddenly weary of combating him for the sake of Avis Arlen. I needed all my mental strength and resourcefulness. I reminded myself, for the struggle to save the original honeymoon plans of Noel and Mary, which Lillian and I had pledged ourselves to make before the evening was over.

Mr. Veritzen's voice startled me out of my planning.

"Am I so fearsome as to cause you to shiver like that?" he asked.

Hints for the Household

If you must stack dishes try to find time to let the water run over them while you are piling them. It will mean a much easier job for you when you come back to them.

Place one or two sheets of waxed paper on top of the custard pudding or pie when putting it away to cool. This will prevent it forming a crust on top.

Soda crackers buttered and sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon and put in the oven for a few minutes are good to serve with your tea, coffee or hot chocolate.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

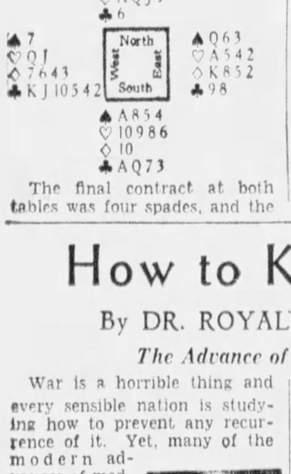
An Interesting Match

So great is the rapidly increasing interest in Contract Bridge that cities are now staging intercity matches to determine which center of population has the stronger players. An interesting example of this type of play was conducted recently between the rival California metropolises, Los Angeles and San Francisco. A men's team-of-four and also a ladies' team-of-four journeyed from Los Angeles to San Francisco and played two teams representing San Francisco. The tournament lasted three days, 100 boards being played. Finally, after an interesting struggle, the San Francisco men won by the insignificent margin of 60 points. The San Francisco women were more fortunate or else better players as, after starting off with a good lead, they finished their last board with a lead of 2,320 points.

One of the interesting hands played in this match gave to the Declarers, sitting in the North, representing both San Francisco and Los Angeles, an opportunity to make a very fine strip and end-play to fulfill a rather difficult contract. The hand was:

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The final contract at both tables was four spades, and the Opening lead by East was the club, 9. It is, of course, obvious, with all the hands exposed, that the Declarer has a simple task in making the contract of four if he guesses the spade situation. However, both Declarers failed to guess this puzzle and thus had a losing spade trick. They could thus lose but two other tricks and complete their contract. The first trick was taken with the club Ace, and North then took two rounds of trumps, winning the second with the Ace in Dummy, and led the diamond Ten from Dummy, which he refused to finesse, going up with the Ace. He returned the Queen, East covered, and the trick was ruffed in Dummy. The Declarer then returned to his own hand by ruffing a small club, laid down the diamond Knave, on which a small heart was discarded from Dummy, and followed with his last diamond, which was ruffed.

Now the stage was set for the end-play. East was marked with no cards in his hand except hearts and the high spade, so the Declarer now led the trump, forcing East into the lead. Thus East had no choice of a lead save a heart, which permitted the fulfillment of the contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

North is the Dealer. West picks up his cards and passes before anyone else has bid. What is the penalty?

Answer—According to the new rules there is no penalty for a pass out of turn made before any other call has been made. West's pass is disregarded and the bidding reverts to the Dealer.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

The Advance of Plastic Surgery

War is a horrible thing and every sensible nation is studying how to prevent any recurrence of it. Yet, many of the modern advances of medicine can be traced to the untiring efforts of military surgeons during war.

Dr. Copeland

For example, plastic surgery owes its present day perfection to the World War. Though it was practiced before the war, it is only recently that great advances have been made in this branch of surgery. During and immediately after the World War remarkable functional as well as cosmetic restorations were performed.

I receive many inquiries concerning plastic surgery. "What is plastic surgery?" "Is it a dangerous procedure, and would you advise it?" These are among the questions I am asked.

The plastic surgeon reconstructs damaged portions of the human body. Living tissue from a nearby part is removed to a new location to restore the features, or to renew the normal condition.

Unfortunately, this new specialty in surgery has become the rage in many sections of the country. Like all "fads," it can be overdone and unless properly conducted can lead to harmful rather than beneficial results. Of course, I do not mean to imply that plastic surgery is to be shunned. But certainly it should be undertaken only upon the advice of a physician.

In all instances it is imperative that the surgeon be competent. He should be recognized in his community as a plastic surgeon and in good standing with the local medical society.

Nasal defects, bony deformities and unsightly scars are the common indications for a plastic operation. Credit must be given these specialists for the benefits they have afforded victims of serious burns and other disfiguring accidents.

Contrary to the common belief, plastic surgery does not involve mysterious methods. It is merely the application of well understood surgical rules. The plastic surgeon studies the case before operation. In many instances he photographs the patient and then by the use of plastic model figures out how best to correct the defect. He knows in advance exactly what will be done in the operation.

The many improvements in surgery enable the plastic surgeon to operate at a minimum risk to the patient. Little discomfort is felt and no unsightly scars are left. As a rule the operation is a simple one and not to be feared.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello ladies and gentlemen:

Thought I saw Gen. Balbo in the hotel yesterday. I followed him into the dining room, where I encountered an old friend whose name I never knew till then, Happy Felton, the orchestra man.

"I was amazed to see the "general" take his seat with the orchestra and I asked Happy, "How come?"

So here's as how it is. Sammy Sandy, who plays the guitar, is a cousin of the Italian consul in New York. When Gen Balbo's fleet arrived Sammy, through his cousin, got the band boys front row positions on the receiving line and afterwards an invite to the reception.

Sammy, whose Latin temperament was hitting on high, raved about the nattiness of the general's appearance, going into ecstacies over the unique facial adornment, all of which soured on Harry Sacks, who plays the sax in the aforementioned orchestra.

When he commented that he could raise a beard like Balbo's in a week, the native patriotism of Sammy, after he had come down from hitting the ceiling, asserted itself and he emphatically denied the possibility. A bet was made.

The beard was grown. It's possessor liked it so well he kept it and, Happy himself is interested in it because it means publicity for the band.

Hm-m, now that I think of it, Happy was right.

In one of those loose moments (you get it), I discussed the value of placing newspapers under the rug.

As an afterthought I mentioned that you ought to make sure it's a Sun-Telegraph.

Today comes a letter from Mrs. Harry Cochnor, West Newton, who has been reading the paper for, oh, so many years, and for the same length of time has been placing them under the floor covering.

Have you nerve control, ladies and gentlemen? The wildcat has threatened to make another appearance on the radio.

How does it feel to win an election? Listen in tomorrow evening. Pittsburgh's choice for Mayor will speak.

Audiences Distract Artists

By AIRCASTER

The Columbia broadcasting system has decided after a serious study of the problem to discourage the studio audience on the theory that it is not worth sacrificing the excellency of a broadcast intended for millions for a few people in the broadcast room.

For nearly a year, the officials of CBS have watched sponsored programs attended by large audiences in such places as Carnegie Hall, and while exercising no authority over the admission of visitors, has become convinced that a visible audience is distracting to many of the artists, as well as constituting a psychological hazard.

Significant is the fact that only 550 passes to studios were issued by CBS during the month of October, compared to the 32,000 issued in October, 1932.

F. D. R.'s Double

Adams supplies the Presidential voice in CBS dramas. He has made an exhaustive study of the Roosevelt speech, and has found among other things that his most difficult problem is echoing Mr. Roosevelt, when the latter has a cold.

Adams points out that the President has three distinct ways of speaking.

The cigaret firm which once featured Downey, Wons and Renard, has signed up with the CBS for two half-hour broadcasts a week.

Blessings

Eddie Cantor defers his return to the air until November 19.

Other news—Tony Wons broadcasts a theory that everybody in the entertainment profession is slightly crazier than when they first entered it.

Harry Horlick wants the customers to know that he will pay for and play any Gypsy airs not already in his library.

Dick Leibert has a new gadget in the Radio City organ, especially installed to whine like a horse on those occasions when he can't avoid playing "The Last roundup."

Old Age Pension Bill Opposed

—By MARK SHIELDS—

At least one of the propagandizing groups which backed the proposed old age pension amendment to the state Constitution has asked Gov. Pinchot not to embrace in this special legislative session call a suggestion that an attempt be made to secure old age pensions through passage of a direct bill, ignoring any intervening steps such as changing the Constitution.

Mr. Shields.

It is the thought of this group that a bill, if passed without previous action to alter the Constitution to permit gratuities to any special class, would be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. Instead of forcing the issue they would rather initiate a new amendment, either in the special or the regular session of 1935, and put off any final decision until 1938, which is the next election at which constitutional amendments can be considered.

There are, however, reasons to believe that Mr. Pinchot will not heed these admonitions of hesitancy. Of course, nothing definite as to his call will be known until Thursday at the earliest, when it will be determined whether the $25,000,000 relief and hospital bond issue has been passed.

It is known that, since the provision to submit the old age pension question to the voters was defeated by the Legislature, the Governor has secured legal opinions from conservative sources that a bill rather than the cumbersome method of amending the Constitution is a way to get the old age pension question to a decision.

Admitted Bill Would Be Challenged

It is admitted that such a bill, if passed, would be immediately challenged in the Supreme Court. It is also conceivable that joined to this challenge would be a questioning of the legislative right to grant mothers' assistance without some constitutional revision.

It is recollected that the two points of assistance were joined in the constitutional amendment which was defeated by the last Legislature. Proponents of mothers' assistance have realized for some time that they were skating on thin ice, and that is why they wanted a constitutional authorization for a grant which has been made for many years, but which constantly has been subject to court attack.

Gov. Pinchot has been advised that the Supreme Court decision upholding the Talbot relief acts, the constitutionality of which was challenged, offers a precedent through which pensions to the aged might be sustained without constitutional change. In that decision it was stated that the police powers of the state might be utilized for relief if an emergency existed.

It is perhaps true that no emergency could be built on the assumption that the aged would be neglected without lawful pensions. But an emergency might be worked about as affecting the drain on local taxing bodies through the necessity of raising revenue for the maintenance of county homes. The upkeep of these institutions is a county responsibility now, and the counties throughout the state are finding it extremely difficult to collect sufficient money to meet their obligations.

State Could Relieve County's Burden

Allegheny County, for example, this year probably will collect no more than 68 per cent of its taxes. This means deficits which must be met by revenue from some other sources. If the county, for example, could have the costs of assisting the aged transferred to the state some relief might be afforded.

This, at least, is the basis on which arguments are being made for introduction of a direct bill in the Legislature for old age pensions.

Some politicians do not want to vote on the old age pension question in the session which will start next week. They are embarrassed by some connections which do not approve the proposition, through constitutional amendment or directly. But at the same time they realize that to vote in the negative will be unpopular and may jeopardize their chances of election next year. Among this group can be found some of the senators who refused to permit the submission of the amendment at today's election.

Mr. Pinchot would like to emphasize this embarrassment. He would like, if the bill is beaten, to make it an issue in the statewide campaign of next year if he is a candidate for the Senate—as he more than likely will be. He takes the position that, even if the bill should pass and be declared unconsitutional, no ground would be lost, as the constitutional change could be inaugurated in 1935.

At any rate, Mr. Pinchot is said to be unable to understand the reasoning of a group which has professed an extreme zeal for old age pensions, yet does not wish to avail itself of any opportunity, however remote, to achieve the aim.

CLIENTS UNPAID BY ATTORNEY, COURT TOLD

Keilly Hired Runners, Witnesses Charge; Records Removed

Taking of testimony in the disbarment proceedings against David S. Keilly, charging misconduct and misappropriation of funds in settlement of damage suits, will be continued tomorrow.

Nearly 40 witnesses have been heard. Some testified before Judges George V. Moore and John P. Egan that Keilly failed to pay hospital bills, for which he received the money, and to pay litigants in settlement of their suits.

RUNNERS CHARGED

It was testified he employed runners, some of whom informed prospective clients their injuries were "worth $1,000 a stitch."

According to Attorney James M. Graham, representing the Allegheny County Bar Association, many persons had complained to the district attorney's office of Keilly's conduct.

R. Murray Gibson, the accused man's counsel, informed the court that all of Keilly's belongings and records had been removed from his office.

ON WAY TO COAST

Attorney Graham was unable to estimate the total Keilly owes his clients, but Attorney Gibson admitted it was many thousands of dollars.

Keilly, it was said, left Pittsburgh last week for California by automobile. He wrote to his attorney to offer no defense for him.

REPLACE PLAN FOR U. S. SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—An orderly replacement program, providing for the replacement of each new vessel built as soon as it is worn out, is to be recommended to Congress by the Navy in a plan being prepared by Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations.

It would call for Congress, in appropriating for a new cruiser, to provide also for a regular amortization of the ship so that at the end of 20 years—estimated the useful life of each craft—funds would be on hand for a new vessel.

Although the American Navy has never employed such a plan, several foreign navies have used this system for years.

The useful lives of the various categories of vessels are battleships, 20 years; cruisers, 20, and destroyers and submarines approximately 15.

Officials have not yet prepared recommendations to Congress for naval building next year.

Construction is now beginning on 37 new vessels being built principally with $238,000,000 assigned from public works funds. Even with these the Navy would still be about 101,100 tons short of the limit of the London treaty, and officials are hopeful that Congress will appropriate each year to meet this deficiency by 1939 or 1940.

The defendat was his father, Michael J. Flannigan, Sr., former cashier of the Nebraska State Bank of Long Pine, who was charged with embezzlement.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Nov. 7.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

As you read this, it will be election day. Six states are repealing prohibition, and New York City is repealing its Mayor.

Will Rogers

It's taken Al Smith 12 years of his life (and a defeat for nomination, a defeat for the presidency) and just about every other type of bad break that a man that is in the right could get, so when you newspapers write your editorials tomorrow, telling how it all come about, kindly remember there was something under the brown derby besides a New York dialect.

And P. S.—There is quite a few other things that this same gentleman has been ahead of his time on. Smith's obituary should read: "He thought too fast for the mob." Yours, WILL.

3-Cushion Shot Will Complete Farley's String

—By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER—

Reading from dry to wet we have Penn., Ohio, the twin Carolinas, old Kentucky and Utah.

Repeal runs its string out if it gets half of them. Leave it to Mr. Farley to wind up the game with a three-cushion bank.

This revolt in the sawdust is a tribute to the sturdy individualism of the American citizen. Even our soberest man reserves the right to sign his own pledges.

We know it will work out all right and please everybody. The boys who do not fear the return to the corner saloon are the lads who never left it.

It gives the reformers a chance to start all over again. They can view with alarm when soliciting subscriptions and point with pride to the number of reformations on the morning after.

DENIES WIPING HANDS ON FLAG

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 7. (AP.)—J. A. Rubio Padilla, Cuban student, today issued a signed statement denying Havana dispatches saying he was reported to have wiped his hands on the American flag before boarding an airplane for Miami yesterday.

The statement read:

"Reports that I wiped my hands on the American flag are absolutely false. I want the American people to know that we have respect for the American flag and we would not do such a thing.

"I do not known how the reports were circulated because when I entered the plane I had my hat, an overcoat and a package in my hands, and could not have touched the flag, which was in the ceiling of the plane.

"I did not know anything about the reported incident until after my arrival from Havana, after the newspaper story was shown to me by Ismael Seijas, the Cuban consul here.

"Senor Carlos Primo Socarras and I are not delegates to the Pan-American conference at Montevideo as was reported in the newspaper story, but are going there as secretaries of the Cuban delegation."

DANCER TROUPE LEADER HELD

Albert Hunter, alias Brother Albert, 34, Negro, of New York, arrested in a police raid Friday in a Center avenue hotel with some members of a dancing troupe he was training here, was committed to jail yesterday in default of $2,500, pending a hearing before the United States Commissioner.

In a complaint filed before the latter, Hunter was charged with violating the Mann act. Two Cleveland girls named in the complaint were held as material witnesses. Before being turned over to the federal authorities, Hunter was arraigned before Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court and held for court.

The girls involved in the federal charge were said to have been brought here by Hunter in a private bus October 14. He was said to have assembled the girls through advertisements.

Michigan's Fans Warned to Carry Liquor Well

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 7.—(INS.)—The University of Michigan athletic board of control today served notice on football fans that henceforth anybody who can't hold his liquor at Michigan games will be summarily tossed out of the stadium.

The notice was contained in a statement signed by Fielding H. Yost, athletic director. The notice is being enclosed with tickets mailed to purchasers.

It was understood that the numerous fights and altercations which developed at the Ohio State game prompted the action. The statement said:

"We shall not hesitate to eject from the stadium anyone against whom a reasonable complaint of offensive use of liquor is made."

MURDER TRIAL SET FOR NEGRO

LEESBURG, Va., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—George Crawford, Negro, is to go on trial in Loudoun County Circuit Court on December 12 for the alleged slaying of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley at Middleburg, Va., on January 13, 1932.

The date of trial was fixed today by Judge James L. McLemore, of Suffolk, after Crawford had pleaded "not guilty" to the murder of Mrs. Ilsley and her maid, Mrs. Nina Buckner.

Crawford was arraigned after Judge McLemore had overruled a motion by defense counsel to quash the indictment on the grounds that when selecting a list of 48 men for the grand jury that indicted Crowford none of those on the list were Negroes.

Judge McLemore maintained that defense counsel had failed to prove that Negroes had been excluded from the jury list because of race or color.

Miners Complaints Under NRA Probed

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Complaints of 14 miners that coal operators discharged them without sufficient cause will be investigated Friday by a special arbitration board.

The inquiry was decided upon yesterday at a conference of United Mine Workers' officials and home coal producers. The conferees signed dues "check-off" and penalty clause agreements under the NRA coal code.

TREASURE HUNT PROVES VAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The big River Forest treasure hunt turned up a nice assortment of tintypes, a bridge score pad and pencils, some outmoded clothes, a dressmaker's dummy and a tube of toothpaste.

There was one item of possible importance up in the attic of the 18-room mansion once occupied by eccentric John Hoffman, dime novelist.

Charles Schreiber, attorney for one of the Hoffman heirs, in his search for hidden wealth, today discovered a pack of real estate abstracts indicating that in 1919 the writer had an income of about $6,500 a month from real property. But there were no bonds, no old-style greenbacks. Schreiber took possession of the papers he found, everybody climbed down out of the dusty garret, had their pictures taken and the treasure hunt broke up.

It was started by the petition in Probate Court yesterday asking authority to look for hidden wealth, Hoffman having left a visible estate worth about $36,000 when he died in 1928, though reputedly rich.

Auto Injuries Halt Fan Dancer's Career

The appointment was made on petition of Kaplan, previously appointed receiver of the concern by the Federal Court in Cleveland. Bond was set at $7,500.

Writs of attachment have been issued against four buses of the company through a justice of the peace at Bridgeville, according to the petition, which asks for a restraining order to prevent their disposal at a constable's sale.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

No Cooking! No Work! Real Saving!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money, and it's a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs.

MRS. MIX MARKS 75TH BIRTHDAY; TOM ABSENT

DU BOIS, Pa., Nov. 7.—Although suffering from a severe cold, Mrs. Elizabeth Mix, white-haired mother of bronco-riding Tom Mix of film fame, continued a custom of years' standing and held open house at her home yesterday, 211 Dubois avenue, in celebration of her seventy-fifth birthday.

Officials of the town, friends, relatives and neighbors dropped in the little frame house for a few minutes during the day and tendered her their congratulations. Many of her older friends she took through the house, telling them about the pieces of furniture she has had since her wedding day. Her special pride was the old bedroom suite given to her as a wedding gift which she still uses.

TOM NOT PRESENT

Mrs. Edward Swartz, of Dubois, helped her mother receive her many guests. A second daughter, Mrs. D. Dell, of Long Beach, Cal., was unable to be here.

Despite her age, Mrs. Mix continues to do her own housework and cooking. And during the spring and summer months she takes special pride in having one of the finest flower gardens and lawns in all of Dubois.

Although she has lived in small towns most of her life, Mrs. Mix likes to travel and has crossed the continent several times to visit her son in Hollywood.

Just as Tom Mix made a beloved pet of his horse, Tony, his mother has one special pet, a canary named Sonny Boy, who, in his own twittering way, chirped all day yesterday wishing his owner many more happy birthdays.

WCAE's Transmission Station Rising

Construction Speeded On New WCAE Station

Transmission Plant To Be Another Landmark

Air guns biting deep into the rocky earth, and other guns smashing heads on steel bolts are erecting a modern transmission station for WCAE atop the high hill in Baldwin Township.

During the last few days the steel for the station itself has been placed; transformers to carry the electric current to the station have been installed, and digging the foundation pits for the great vertical tower has been finished.

The gas line has progressed rapidly, as has the water line. The erection of the tower should be under way before long. The shaft is the most modern in radio. Tensile strength of the tons of metal pointing skyward has been given every engineering test, both from the constructural and radio sides.

Special night lights to distinguish the transmission tower, for safety of aviators, have been received and will be placed following the completion of the tower.

Forester's Death Called Accidental

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The death of Robert Y. Stuart, chief forester of the United States, in a fall from the seventh-floor window of a building, recently, is termed an accident in the verdict of a coroner's jury.

Stuart formerly was head of the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters. His widow and several others yesterday testified he had been suffering from dizzy spells.

Woman Acquitted In Poison Death

MADISON, Ind., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. Pearl Holman was acquitted last night by a Jefferson Circuit Court jury that heard her trial for murder in connection with the death by poisoning of Eugene S. Kelley, 26-year-old boarder in her Charleston home in Clark County.

Hampden's Heroine Signed by Movies

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Evelyn Venable, 18-year-old actress who last season was Walter Hampden's leading woman in "Hamlet," was signed today by Paramount Studios to a new long term contract. She will play the leading romantic role opposite Fredric March in a production soon to be started.

Paramount Studios also announced that a contract had been given Carl Brisson, native of Denmark, who has acted and sung his way to sensational success on the English stage and screen. He will come to Hollywood in January.

GIRL ON HUNGER STRIKE IGNORED

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. Lida Auvill, 25, today was in the sixth day of her hunger strike in the city jail here while city officials showed little concern over the situation.

Mrs. Auvill was committeed to jail last Thursday to serve 25 days when she refused to pay a fine imposed by Mayor Martin. She was charged with posting Communistic signs. Mayor Martin pointed out that posting of any sort of signs is a violation of a city ordinance. He said:

"If she does not want to eat that is her affair."

Many postal cards were received by him in which the release of the woman was demanded.

JUNIOR PATROL

Many captains have written to us to tell us that their patrols are making things and working hard at their meetings after the business meeting is over. The girls, for instance, are sewing, and those who can't sew are learning to sew, and they are stringing beads, dressing dolls, making pictures and lots of other things. Some patrols plan to make all the Christmas presents they give their friends this year.

The boys are building furniture and keeping scrapbooks. Indeed, we are glad to hear about all this activity, and we hope every Junior Patrol member can join a patrol and find useful things to do as soon as ever he can.

Guess you have been noticing that Junior has his football team well started now. The boys are practicing hard, too. As for Butch and his Gangster Club, they don't seem to be getting along so well, do they? That's the way with fellows like them. They don't have CO-OPERATION, and when fellows can't work together, they usually aren't much good themselves. It takes team play to get big things done.

Now here's a letter from Charles F. Berg, Jr., of 537 Perrysville road, West View, which made us feel good all over:

Read it fellows!

"I am a little boy six years old and would like to join the Patrol. I am now in the St. John's Hospital on the North Side, and I have a broken leg. Will you send my membership card and emblem to the Hospital?

"I have sent fruit and candy and toys to the poor little children in the wards."

Fine and dandy, Charles, and we're proud of you for being so kind even though you are hurt yourself. We hope your leg gets sound and well again just as soon as possible. Maybe when you are up and around again you will want to form a Junior Patrol, and keep on helping others. You know, whenever you make others happy, you help them.

Yes, we will send your emblem and card right to the hospital.

There are other letters today, fellows, but they will keep until tomorrow. Keep on writing in the news, you captains and secretaries.

A LIQUID LAXATIVE BEST FOR CHILDREN

(For three reasons explained below)

Did you know a laxative that works just right for you, can work havoc with a child?

That the laxative habit can be contracted at the age of six?

Parents Aroused At Last!

Doctors urge the use of a liquid laxative for children; preferably one with senna. A liquid laxative can be regulated as to dose. The natural laxative action of senna does not weaken the bowels.

Druggists report increasing sales of liquid laxatives. Mothers are rapidly discovering the advantage of the liquid form. Thousands of cases of ill-health—and half-health—in children are being cleared-up by stopping all use of laxatives of adult strength.

Give Them a Chance!

The preparation most favored for child use is California Syrup of Figs. It is a fruity syrup with the right amount of senna for gentle stimulation of a child's bowels. It gives the right kind of help.

If the bowels aren't moving regularly and thoroughly, don't give any medicine that drains the system dry. Give a liquid senna preparation like California Syrup of Figs. A little every day, and reduce the dose each day. At the end of one week—stop. You'll be surprised how long it will be before the bowels need any further help. It may be months.

Be sure you get the real California Syrup of Figs, with "California" on the label. If you get the right preparation, and use it the right way, you can absolutely end all worry over constant sluggish spells, bilious attacks, constipation.

All druggists keep California Syrup of Figs, ready for use. It is highly recommended for regulating children, and to undo the mischief done by habit-forming laxatives.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

Society Sees Pola Negri In Play

All the loyal Theater Guild patrons last night went to the Nixon to see Pola Negri in "A Trip to Pressburg," and gathered in the foyer between acts to greet friends, to smoke, to chat.

The Alan Magee Scaifes were talking during one intermission with Mrs. William Penn Snyder, Mrs. Scaife chose an interesting black crepe dress with the bodice having a peplum and cut steel buttons down the front.

In another gathering were the junior William Christopher Robinsons, the Alexander Laughlin Robinsons, the W. D. Georges and Althea Robinson and Laura Childs.

Mrs. Robinson's dull gold crepe gown had a deep scarf-cape of the crepe, bordered with a narrow ruffle. Mrs. Alexander Laughlin Robinson's purple crepe gown had a draped shoulder line and sleeves reaching the elbow, although the upper arm was bare—one of the most amusing fashions of the season.

Mrs. George (Mary Franklin Robinson) was in black velvet with a cape collar edged in ermine. Althea Robinson in rose crepe, and Laura Childs in black velvet. Mrs. W. C. Robinson, Sr., was there, too.

Mrs. Frederick Gwinner's black velvet gown had a tailored look, accounted for in part for prim white velvet cuffs and a white velvet band at the neck-line.

A black crepe dinner dress with the sleeves slight from the shoulder to the elbow banded with white fur, was worn by Mrs. Simon T. Patterson.

Speaker at Century Club Holds Strife in India Struggle With Self

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The real struggle in India is not between England and India, but in the soul of India herself, Sir Frederick Whyte told the Twentieth Century Club when he opened the lecture season yesterday morning, speaking on "India in 1933." Moreover, Sir Frederick declares Gandhi's fast at Poona was not a challenge to England, but to the Brahmins, daring them to let him die.

Vast as India's political problem is today, the underlying problems are social, economic and religious, particularly social and religious, and cannot be solved by political means, the English visitor declared. The solution, Sir Frederick believes, will turn on India's own inner ability, her eventual fate will rest on whether she has sufficient vision of human liberty to settle the caste question, which is an essential prerequisite to democracy.

To appreciate India in 1933, it is necessary to understand the country's past, Sir Frederick stated, so he briefly sketched the background, saying that, while the western world has carried its message around the globe and harnessed the forces of nature and utilized them to its purpose, Hindu India looks upon the physical with fear and its only realities are in an invisible world.

For two generations English has been the vehicle of public instruction, and the youth of India has turned us back on Indian tradition. Sir Frederick spoke of "the warring communities" which will make difficult the new system of parliamentary government.

MISS ELIZABETH NEWELL

INDIVIDUALITY WITH SHORT HAIR

By PRUNELLA WOOD

ALL that pother about the more formal and dignified fashions that came along being a tip to go out and grow the makings of a pompadour seems to have fallen flat. More and more tresses are being snipped off, on the contrary, for the newest coiffures are built with hair thinned to an artistic point, so that flat sectors and softening little curls can be fashioned successfully.

The pompadour influence is at work on the approved silhouette, however; it is the upward movement of the hair that we strive for now, the same line that used to end in a crown of puffs or huge twisted ropes of hair when wearing lots of it was terribly chic.

IT IS suprising how many effects can be arrived at on the same head, so to speak. No woman need feel that she has thrown her individuality away when she takes a haircut; the old-time "bob" may have been almost a service cut, but the latest ones are versatile.

Just to suggest some of the possibilities; one can wear a center part by day, with brush curls at the back and off-the-face wings of business-like simplicity. By night the same brush curls can be pushed far over to one side, behind an ear, and their ends plumed like a coxcomb. Or the center part can be carried down to the nape of the neck and rows of tight curls curved over each ear, high on the head in a very regal manner.

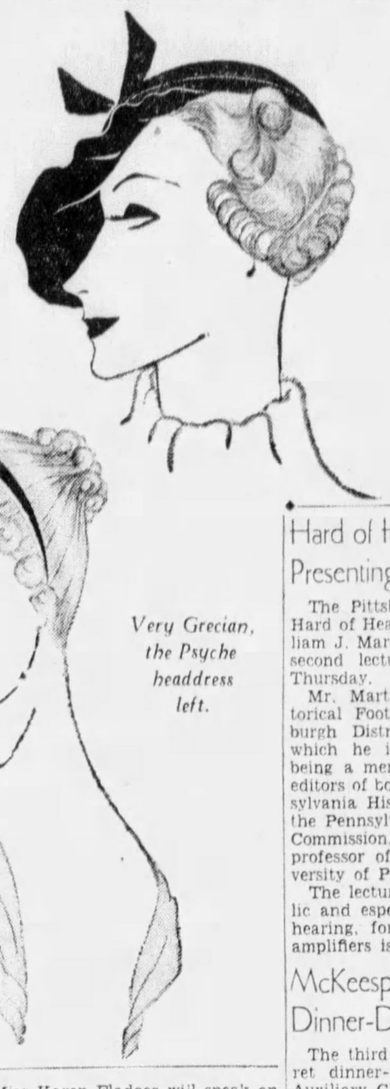
THE Grecian coiffure with its upward line, away from the face, is one that becomes the new evening gowns which offer a high-necked front, no back whatever above the waist, and a trained sheathe skirt. With the aid of a bandeau and a lacquer finish of metal or some brisk, becoming hair tint (both washed off easily the next morning) classic arrangements of this sort are perfectly feasible, and are predicted freely for this season. They stay put beautifully, and at the same time are perfectly soft and graceful.



The coiffure sketched left is one that does well under a hat and for the evening toilette. Half the hair is curled forward onto the cheek, with its flat sector decorated with an independent lock which curls away from the face. Brush curls pile high in back.

The face curls in the coiffure, right, are softening and tune the somewhat advanced design to the individual face. The whole arrangement is lacquered lightly with yellow gold.

The back hair on the coiffure, left, is wrapped over in two sections with tapered edges. The ears are softened by forward-turned curls in wings, and delicate bangs edge the face.

Of course, there are literally dozens of gadgets, hardware and such to talk about . . . but the thing which we loved on sight, and thought you would too, was the new bath hamper! Not the regular bathroom-y sort of white wicker one . . . but a glorified version which is really a potential dressing table, too. Made with a tilting hamper in its middle center . . . 3 shelves at the sides . . . a drawer in the top middle . . . and a marbelized top which looks elegant with bottles strewn over it. Size to fit most bathrooms . . . in colors, $10.50.

From the land of roast beef and rotund tummies comes the Mitcham Lavender which has been taken up with such interest. And from Mitcham comes this brand new toiletry feature . . . Solidified Brilliantine, the easy way to make your hair do the tricks you ask of it . . . and making wave-set unnecessary!

Firstly, this smells very good! Secondly, merely passing your hand over it assures your getting enough yet not too much (contrary to the usual spraying method)! And it lasts a long time. 75c box.

A right-straight-from-New-York kit of famous toiletries! Made of smart black leather with a white grained leather top and a mirror fitted into it inside! This newcomer to your boudoir brings a box of powder . . . foundation cream . . . cleansing cream . . . special mixture . . . and orange flower lotion—all in regular size jars! The whole caboodle for $5!

And yet another kit . . . this being the most recent offspring of another cosmetician's fertile brain. A Pick-Me-Up-Kit, this, containing such rejuvenators as strawberry mask . . . makeup lotion . . . facial oil . . . and powder! The idea being that these are the necessities to the revival of that sent-for-and-couldn't-come sort of face most of us wear by 4.30 p. m. Cost, $3.

Things I Never Knew 'Til Now

(Wonder What I Won't Know Until Next Week?)

That Clark Gable, "the perfect lover" as he is described by his exploiters, was madly in love with a girl named Treely in Ohio. But she never knew it! Because Clark, the perfect lover, was too bashful to tell her!

That the world's most cultured people are said to be the Icelanders. In ratio to numbers they read and write more books of a thoughtful nature than any other group in the world.

That the Johnstown (Pa.) flood occurred as late as 1889, yet most history books give the wrong day. Even the official Pennsylvania State Manual bonered it. (And they pick on me when I fumble!)

That we owe our Independence not to George Washington—but to his opponent—Gen. Howe.

That Gen. Howe, arch-villain in American history, could have won the war for England—but didn't because he liked it here too much. (The source that submitted that one adds: "Let 'em rave, it's true!")

That the Big Chief on the penny isn't an Indian!

That D. W. Griffith, who gave so many opportunities to unknown talent turned down Lionel Barrymore, so sure he was he'd fail.

That "idiot" up till the Middle Ages carried its true and correct definition—"a private citizen." (Yeah, a person like you.)

That you get delicious butter and milk—from kerosene!

That E. L. Wheeler, the creator of the "Deadwood Dick" dime novel—which was such a best seller—never saw the West.

That you are supposed to know how to tell when you are going to die—by finding out how hard your eye lenses are.

That the United States is overloaded with domestic pork, but the Washington Market in New York buys its pork from South America, Sweden, China and even as far away as New Zealand.

That a Mr. Loon lives on Asylum avenue in Hartford, Conn.

That "Big Bill" Tilden of tennis renown, as a student, couldn't make the University of Pennsylvania tennis team.

That the most important man in the United States failed in his final exams at the Columbia Law School. (So cheer up.)

That statistics revealed that in nine out of ten head-on auto collisions the passengers are killed—the drivers never!

That if you put 1,700 pins in a glass of water, the pins alone will more than fill the glass, but not a drop of water will overflow.

That the Players Club in New York is the only theatrical club that belongs to the Social Register. (Fawncey thet!)

That in the recent primaries held in Manhattan—nine people voted for James J. Walker. (And to make things more irritating for some locals, city property downtown features Jim's name as Mayor!)

That the most amusing item I've read in a year was about Senator Copeland, on his way to investigate crime, being robbed of $400.

That a seal never drinks water. A seal-trainer explains that any water that seals take in is absorbed through their skin.

That another scientific fact is that water is the same as marble and a lead slug exactly the same as a nickel.

That the U. S. was charged $100 for each soldier taken across on a British transport. (How've y'been?)

That not a single screen star is proportioned in person as on the screen. This is due to the projection booth being placed high above the screen. Lean stars seem leaner, short ones taller, etc.

That Bobby Leach plunged safely over the Niagara in a barrel—and then slipped on an orange peel and broke his neck.

That the world's greatest wrestler, they say, is a guy named Gama, living in India. He floored Zbyszko in 8 seconds.

That Robert Ingersoll, in reply to a query as to his health, said: "Oh, so much better"—and then died.

That in today's mayoralty election there will be but two or three votes cast in the 3rd E. D. of the 4th Assembly District, Richmond Hill, at a cost to the city of $500.

And that it is good to see the word "chiseler" finally recognized. Hey, Bernie! How does it feel to have your name in the dictionary?

Danube Flows Sluggishly Through Pola Negri's Viennese Drama

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Vienna and Berlin approved enthusiastically when Max Reinhardt put on Leo Perutz's drama, "A Trip to Pressburg," which had its second or third American avatar last night at the Nixon Theater. Although Pola Negri made her speaking debut in America as the damaged heroine, the question remains unanswered—what did Vienna and Berlin see in this somewhat underdone melodrama?

Years ago, before she was famous, Willa Cather wrote a short story called "Paul's Case," which helped to make her famous. "A Trip to Pressburg" has the germ of that story for its leitmotif, with the scarlet woman added to supply the emotion. Not very much emotion is squeezed out of the sordid plot, and Pola Negri doesn't even have any expert vamping to vary the tawdry tale.

Mr. Seibel

Leo Perutz, in the version put together by Harold Johnsrud and Philip Dunning, does not shine as a dramatist of compelling power. It is true, he projects an assorted lot of characters into his picture, and moves them about to some dramatic climaxes, but it is very obvious that he moves them, and his climaxes somehow fail to click.

The total effect is decidedly undramatic, and it needs a lot of the leaven of Owen Davis and Theodore Kremer to lift it above the level of the Danube, which flows sluggishly by in the last act, while Pola Negri is mildly murdered by her boyish admirer.

THE FAMOUS VAMP

Pola Negri, of course, is the famous vamp who swept the movie world off its feet in "Passion" and other pictures, playing opposite Emil Jannings. She has mastered English very well, and has an agreeable voice, as well as the personality of the siren. But she has very little opportunity to do anything startling either in the portrayal of character or the dynamics of acting.

Richard Whorf, as the lad who robs the bank to run away with this magnificent Messalina, did not succeed in putting the glamour of romance into his part—which alone would make it sympathetic. He is merely a foolish boy, whose brother has spoiled him and put him into a position of trust which he betrays.

Clarence Derwent, who plays the brother, and is also the former husband of the soiled siren, excites more interest, but even he reaches no peak of dramatic power. By far the best acting in the entire cast was done by Eduardo Cianelli as an ex-actor turned bartender, and by Harold Johnsrud, (who helped to make the adaptation) as a swindling theatrical promoter.

A TRICK PROLOGUE

An air of novelty is given to the plot by a trick prologue, which takes place after the actual action of the play. The girl who sees the man across the street staring at her for hours, and finally sends him a note, which arrives after his suicide has been discovered, is almost forgotten by the time her note is delivered.

Like her, there are a lot of other characters which have little enough to do with the drama, including the well-played Madame Weinigl of Florence Edney. All these people move about as by well-regulated clock-work, always appear just in the nick of time to complete the scene, and leave you cold as to their fate. We know that Pola Negri is murdered in the boatstation at the Danube embankment, but we do not care very much. It serves her right!

The only person we feel really sorry for is Eduardo Cianelli, whose 1000 gulden are lost by the trick of the rascally promoter. Eduardo is a good actor and a good bartender, two useful and rare species.

Pressburg is 35 miles from Vienna—and this drama is just about as far from human reality—despite the names of Max Reinhardt and Pola Negri, and the laudable efforts to create a Viennese atmosphere.

'Mrs. Wiggs' Proposed

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 7. — Ever since Charlotte Henry was chosen to play "Alice in Wonderland," Hollywood wiseacres have shaken their heads and said:

"Yes, but what after that?"

The answer came yesterday when Norman McLeod, director of the Lewis Carroll fantasy, went to the front office of Paramount and put in a strong plea for the studio to dust off "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and let him do it with Charlotte as Lovey Mary.

Does it surprise you to know that this young actress was slated for the role when Paramount considered the picture a couple of years ago? She was the sweet-faced youngster who played Junior Durkin's girl in "Huckleberry Finn," and who made a bit stand out so sharply that almost every critic in the country searched down the program to find out her name.

"Well, Georgie had a headache this morning, but I took a pill and in two hours he was all right."

"Who is that guy?" demanded Ginger Rogers as Mack walked away.

"That's George Raft's bodyguard," she was told.

Johnny Weissmuller is all goose-pimples. In a scene for "Tarzan and His Mate" yesterday, an irritable lioness went for him. The animal's trainer, Bert Nelson, leaped to the rescue and managed to subdue his charge, but not before he was clawed about the head and shoulders. After treatment at the studio hospital he was able to return to the set.

Films Coming This Week

Ruth Chatterton and George Brent have the leading roles in "Female," a comedy-drama with Miss Chatterton as a business woman, head of a motor company, who is bored socially until George Brent comes along. The picture comes to the Stanley Thursday.

Charles Laughton has the title role in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," opening Thursday in the Fulton. This tale of the king who married six women, two of whom were executed, has much comedy to temper the drama.

Max Baer and Myrna Loy have the featured roles in "The Prize Fighter and the Lady," opening Friday in the Penn. Max Baer is a bouncer who marries Myrna Loy, leaving her when he begins to gain fame as a fighter. Jack Dempsey, Primo Carnera, Walter Huston and Otto Kruger also have prominent roles.

"After Tonight" is a story of a woman spy, played by Constance Bennett, who falls in love with an enemy officer, Gilbert Roland. The picture will head the bill in the Warner and Sheridan Square Friday.

Irene Dunne, Walter Huston, Bruce Cabot, Conrad Nagel and Edna May Oliver have the principal roles in "Ann Vickers," photoplay opening in the Enright tomorrow.

War Spy

Constance Bennett plays a war spy in "After Tonight," coming Friday to the screens of the Warner and Sheridan Square theaters.

'Hollywood on Parade' Variety Bill

The Variety, under its new policy of co-operative management, is presenting "Hollywood on Parade" as the current attraction. The show is in two acts and 38 scenes, among which is "Have a Rose," featuring Martha Patti, Pittsburgh girl with a pleasing soprano voice. Cut roses used in this sketch are tossed to the audience by members of the ensemble. Another musical number, "Locket of Long Ago," featuring Frank McConville, an Irish tenor, is well liked. Mildred Sigal, another pretty Pittsburgh girl, received "a big hand" at the conclusion of her dance. Jeanne Williams, a blonde, is featured as an oriental dancer. Eddie Kaplan, after an absence of three weeks, is back as head comic. He is supported by Fred Binder, Eddie Lorraye, comedians; Chic Hunter, straightman, and Eddie Innis, juvenile.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Both Otis Skinner and his daughter, Cornelia Otis Skinner, who will come to the Nixon the latter part of next week in a series of character portrayals, may be credited with having done right by our Nell, meaning "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," otherwise Nell Gwyn, an actress who became the mistress of a king. Mr. Skinner, a few years ago, wrote a book, "Mad Folk of the Theater," in which he devoted a chapter to Nell Gwyn. His daughter, who will be here to give her novel entertainment November 16, 17 and 18, does her share for Nell as one of the character portrayals of "The Loves of Charles II." Nelly was a hussy, but quite evidently a beautiful and witty one, since by these assets alone, she became a popular actress and the favorite of high-placed men, although she was a slum product who never had a chance as a child. Her career is part of the history of England and the foundation of one of its noble houses, still in existence. Besides "The Loves of Charles II," the monodramas of Miss Skinner will include "The Wives of Henry VIII" and "The Empress Eugenie," each to be preceded by other character sketches. All parts in these protean bills are played by Miss Skinner alone.

The Beverly Sisters, dancers in the Pitt this week, are really Helen, Edna May and Marie Buck, of the North Side, former students of Allegheny High School. Last season they were in a production called "Who's Here." They took to the stage three years ago, prior to which they were a radio feature of KQV. Five years ago Helen won a Mary Pickford "Best Girl" contest, being rewarded with a trip to Hollywood.

Civic Players Amuse in Comedy

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Pittsburgh's newest theater, The Civic Playhouse, made its bow last night, and a good lusty bow it was, too, in the presence of a rather numerous, if not capacity audience, which, to use a comparison of the gay nineties, or, perhaps the eager eighties, made up with enthusiasm for what it lacked in numbers. However, that lack was not so great, either, considering. The reason for the enthusiasm was a right pleasing little play, "Three-Cornered Moon," which is as whimsical as its title, as crazy as shampooed hair and as funny as dignity taking a tumble.

The comedy, a delirious creation by Gertrude Tonkonogy, was presented on a stage erected in the ballroom of the Hotel Schenley and the young players of the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse did themselves proud with it. It is all about a mother of three irresponsible sons and a daughter, and the latter's novel-dreaming sweetheart, and a doctor friend of the family, the youngsters of which are pretty well bored of one another. Then it develops that the mother has lost the family scads in stocks, and they all have to go to work, which makes them regular human beings, well, almost.

The action revolves principally around the daughter, who seems to be the most balanced one in this insane family, but she, too, is easily subject to hysteria, followed immediately by a natural youthful gaiety. To characterize such a part credibly is not so easy, but Helen Wayne carried it off.

Donald, the novel-writer with a "soul" and "sensitivity," whose poesy one imagines is responsible for the title, was given a pretty fillip of reality by Boyd Crawford. Madeline Skelly Foust was sort of Zasu Pittsish as the mother and Leo Daschbach gave a proper blend of sense as the doctor. Others in the cast are Wilmer Swartley, George Hildebrand, Clairissa Gaillot, Regis Manning, and Mary Cheffey.

"Three-Cornered Moon" will be repeated tonight, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Best Laid Plans.

IN ALL other respects, Ruth Robinson was a fairly rational woman. Let anyone mention the subject of liquor, however, and her eyes would glow with a fanatical gleam. She would shiver with indignation and embark upon a prolonged and heated discourse about the joys of Prohibition and the evils of drink.

Perhaps Ruth was not entirely to blame. For if the girl was an ardent dry, her mother was doubly so. In the town in which they lived, the two women were the leading lights for the cause of Prohibition.

It was strange, therefore, that Ruth shoud have consented to become the blushing bride of a certain gentleman whom we will call Bill Jordan. It is stranger still that Bill should have asked her. For while he was not exactly a hard-drinking man, it is true that he did enjoy an occasional session with the cup that blears.

That, however, was before his entrance into what he had fondly believed was to be matrimonial bliss. For he learned in short order that his drinking days had passed into history. He learned, after two or three unpleasant occasions, that liquor was positively taboo for any member of the Jordan household.

The marriage had one good point. Bill's business took him to a city many miles from Ruth's mamma. With his wife removed from the stern influence of his mother-in-law, the man embraced the optimistic hope that his troubles were over.

But he had never been more mistaken. He was to find out that, in every respect, the worthy Mrs. Robinson's influence was ever-present. Need it be said that he grew to hate bitterly even the mention of his mother-in-law's name? Or that, at the end of two years, he was a sadly henpecked man?

At the end of each day, Bill returned reluctantly to his hearthside. He was met at the door by his wife, whose welcoming kiss was merely an excuse to secure a whiff of his breath. All evening he was forced to listen while the little woman expounded her opinions on the subject nearest her heart—Prohibition—or read him extracts froh her mother's last letter.

Perhaps Bill would have suffered indefinitely in this fashion if something had not occurred in the third year of his married life to bring matters to a head. Even as he reached the door that evening, he was quite certain that something had happened. For Ruth was smiling, and that in itself was a most unusual event.

"Bill," she exclaimed, "guess what? Oh, I know you'll be as happy about it as I am! I received a letter from mamma this morning and she's coming to visit us. She's going to stay a week! Isn't that wonderful?"

If Bill was happy about the impending visit, he gave vent to his joy in a strange way. He stamped into the bedroom, flung his hat and coat on the bed, and began to swear softly. To have a woman nagging him continually was bad enough, but by the simple laws of mathematics, two would be just that much worse.

Freedom had never seemed more attractive. He knew Ruth too well even to imagine that she would consent to divorce him. Not, he reflected, that she loved him any too well, but a woman of her type needed an audience for her constant tirades against liquor. And now the old girl was coming to make his life more miserable.

The thought of liquor carried an idea with it. Suppose, he reflected, he were to get unmistakably drunk while his mother-in-law was in the house? He jumped off the bed with a shout of delight. That was the answer. Let them see him drunk. The old lady would rush home on the next train in righteous indignation. And Ruth? Without a doubt, she'd go along, too. She would never remain in the same house with a man whom she would immediately denounce as a vile drunkard.

During the next day or two, Bill pondered over his plan. And the longer he thought about it, the better it seemed. He could hardly wait now until his mother-in-law arrived. And on the first evening that she would be dining with them, he spent an hour in a speakeasy before going home.

When he reached the house, Bill was gloriously drunk. So drunk, in fact, that he actually kissed his wife's mother enthusiastically. He was vaguely conscious of the shocked faces of the two women. But he was in too happy a mood to be concerned over such a trifle.

Bill had brought along a bottle with him, and he retired to his bedroom to continue his drinking. He was not bothered very much even when Ruth and the old lady followed him upstairs. Their shrill voices fell on deaf ears. Not for years had Bill enjoyed himself so thoroughly.

It was a different story the next morning. He awoke feeling as though a stone wall had descended upon his head during the night. His tongue seemed to be swollen beyond all usual proportions. For a few moments, he could remember nothing. Then he began to smile wanly.

He'd certainly done a good job, he reflected. And he wondered if the old girl had gone home yet and whether Ruth was preparing to leave him, or had already left. Then the door of the bedroom opened.

Ruth bent over him. Her face was concerned.

"Bill," she questioned, "how do you feel?"

He muttered, "Fine!" grimacing when he discovered that his mother-in-law was also in the room.

"You'll be all right," Ruth told him. "And, Bill dear, I have a piece of splendid news for you. Mamma and I have been talking things over, and she's consented to help me try to save you from this awful thing.

"Bill, dear, when you were—that way last night, mamma got you to sign the pledge. Now she has decided to stay with us all the time and see that you live up to it." . . .

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—About 20 witnesses called in the contested divorce case of Mrs Helene Falardeau Kelly, beautiful stage blonde known as the "girl with the million dollar feet," were excluded from the courtroom yesterday after Judge Georgianna Bullock said she had seen witnesses making gestures toward Harold Allen Kelly, the husband, when the latter was testifying.

Mrs. Kelly twice won contests for having the most beautiful feet in New England.

Says Church Leaders Can Aid Recovery

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Fifty-four Episcopal bishops were told at a banquet here last night by the Rev. William G. Peck, Manchester, Eng., that economic recovery was dependent upon church leadership.

Mr. Peck held that Communism offers no better prospects for better times than capitalism, and that prosperity will not be restored on the old basis of competition and private profit.

"INSPECTOR DAY"

Comes to Pittsburgh Tomorrow

"Inspector Day"—the new cartoon strip by Lester Lear—is created expressly for readers, children and adults, who have made the detective story the most consistent seller of the day.

INSPECTOR STEVEN DAY.
MARY DAY.
INSPECTOR DAY, THE FAMOUS DETECTIVE IS ONLY ASSIGNED TO THE MOST IMPORTANT CASES--THE UNDERWORLD FEARS HIM MORE THAN ANY OTHER MAN
PETER IS AN ORPHAN--BUT HIS FATHER AND INSPECTOR DAY WERE ROOKIE COPS TOGETHER--PETER HOPES SOMEDAY TO BE A DETECTIVE LIKE INSPECTOR DAY.
WHEN PETER'S FATHER WAS SHOT AND KILLED BY BANDITS---INSPECTOR DAY AND HIS WIFE MARY, HAVING NO CHILDREN OF THEIR OWN--ADOPTED PETER.
(Copyright, 1933, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

—Bizarre Crimes—not gruesome, not morbid—but the kind we all enjoy reading about.

—Real Detection—an intelligent handling of clues to appeal to the logical mind, not merely gun-play and gangster fights.

—A Battle of Wits between Inspector Day and the suave, clever criminal, The Duke—the most dangerous international crook alive.

—Adventure Plus Mystery—not merely adventure alone. The combination supplies the vigorous action and suspense with which the strip is marked.

—Real Characters—a healthy, normal boy, one we'd be glad to have our own boys play with; a detective whose muscles are not concentrated below the neckline; a crook who, in furnishing excitement, does not rely solely on an ability to talk thug English and use his fists.

For Parents—A New Day

Many parents object to having their children read the kind of detective strip which features thug heroes and thug villains. But they can have no objection to Inspector Day.

50,000 CROWD CERTAIN FOR PITT-DUQUESNE FRAY

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

BLUFF STAR TO KEEP PANTHERS WORRIED

One of the main reasons why Duquesne appears certain to prove very tough for Pitt on Saturday is the possession of such a capable right halfback as Art Strutt. Despite the fact that the Dukes will be playing the Panthers in November, a month in which Sutherland coached lines are equal to the best in the land, the ability of this one gridder, plus the forward pasing of Al DeLuca and the punting power of Sil Zaninelli, is likely to keep Pitt plenty worried all afternoon. With Strutt cutting back to the Panthers' weak side—and there are few ball carriers in this part of the football map better at cutting back—the Blue and Gold linemen won't be allowed to tear through as they would like to do.

Art Strutt

The Mingo Junction (O.) streak is rated by many as the best all-around ball-carrying back in the district. On a dozen occasions in Washington last Saturday he was always away for long runs and should he get that extra little break in the battle at the Stadium the Panthers will be in for some uncomfortable moments.

Besides, the presence of Strutt in the Duke secondary defense strengthens that department no little. Against the Dukes last year, Pitt twice went into scoring position after long passes to Joe Skladany had been completed. It may be a different story this time, as Strutt has proved all season that there are no more alert men than he in the district when the opposition tries to gain by the air route.

BLOCKING AND TIMING KEY TO OFFENSE

As usual, talk of systems and the like in football has been overdone in 1933. With due respect to the merits of this or that style, and the methods of one coach or another, it will be found in the last analysis that gridiron games still, as always, are won mainly on fundamentals and man power. Good blocking and split-second timing continue to be the key to a successful offense.

Arthur Sampson, of Harvard, is only one of many football men having no patience with those fans who, because their favorite teams have failed to make the desired yardage in important games, are setting up the cry that new and better plays are needed. As a matter of fact, those teams, Harvard and Dartmouth, for instance, are using the same plays with which they had big seasons in earlier years, the same plays now being used by two of the strongest offensive elevens in the country, Michigan and Princeton, both of which attack from a short kick and single wingback formation.

FAULTY EXECUTION CAUSE OF FAILURE

As Sampson explains, the poor showing of many teams is not because of the offensive system employed, but because of the faulty manner in which the plays are executed. The trouble is in insufficient line charge, ineffective blocking, and imperfect timing. When an offensive line charge can't usher a back six inches forward in a straight line, no formation or play in the world will ever gain any yardage.

When blocking backs allow defensive tackles and ends to smash straight through them to a point several yard's behind the line of scrimmage, no play [illegible] ball. [illegible] interference before blockers have a chance to make contact, nothing will work. And when a team hasn't the man power to wage at least an even battle up front on the scrimmage line, there simply isn't any chance to gain ground with a running attack. There still is no substitute for man power. A big, strong line, with a fast offensive charge, will make the simplest play gain ground.

MADIGAN ONE OF GAME'S GREAT FIGURES

During his latest visit to the East, Slip Madigan, coach of St. Mary's, more strongly than ever impressed critics who came into contact with him as being one of football's greatest figures. Madigan owns a rare personality that has been a big factor in making him a successful coach. He is to St. Mary's what Knute Rockne, who taught him his football, was to Notre Dame, and his building up of the little school near San Francisco into a gridiron power almost paralleis what Rockne accomplished at South Bend.

Slip Madigan

Madigan was a lineman at Notre Dame in the days of George Gipp, Norman [illegible] and Joe Brandy. He played [illegible] from an illness that developed into pneumonia, an act similar to that which cost the great Gipp his life three years later. That Slip has lost none of his courage was indicated a few weeks ago, when, through the newspapers, he personally took the blame for his team's defeat.

TWO DISTRICT MEN PLAYING FOR ARMY

J. E. Strickler, of the North Side, calls attention to the fact that, in addition to the Pittsburgh district gridders mentioned here recently as having played for Army, two others from this region are playing star parts in the Soldiers' present fine season. They are Ralph Bucknam, of Burgettstown, regular center, and Pete Kopcsak, of Greensburg, regular left end.

Strickler adds that, after witnessing the Army Illinois game in Cleveland this fall, he believes the Army players deserve all the good things the critics are saying about them. He pronounces them a smart, smooth-working combination.

VET DOUBTS BAER COULD STOP CARNERA

The opinion held by many boxing men that Max Baer would stop Primo Carnera if a match could be arranged is not shared by Jack McAuliffe, one of the great fighters of the old days, who in 1893 retired undefeated as lightweight champion. McAuliffe told Joe Vila that he doubted very much the ability of Baer to put the giant champion away. He doesn't believe that Baer, with all his recognized punching power, can hit hard enough to knock Carnera down for a count of 10, figuring that Primo is too big and too strong. Besides, McAuliffe points out, Carnera has a pretty fair left hand and can do more harm with his right than is generally believed, though at that Jack thinks the titleholder could not stop Baer as easily as he disposed of Sharkey.

Jack McAuliffe

McAuliffe says he never considered Sharkey a first class heavyweight, and always felt sure that Max Schmeling lacked real gameness. He adds the heavies of the present day lack the strength, endurance, science and pugnacity of Sullivan, Fitzsimmons, Jeffries and Dempsey. Modern light-heavyweights do not appeal to McAuliffe. He says Fitzsimmons never has been equaled.

Temple boxing arena last night.

Only a couple of months out of a hospital, where he was confined twice for back injuries suffered in an automobile accident and aggravated while training for a comeback, Joey, only a welter- [illegible] Akron Golf, O. Black Destroyer Negro middleweight, of Homestead, and punched out a hollow victory in the six-round semi-final. The judges disagreed and the referee's decision ruled the bout a draw, but the spectators were virtually unanimous in the opinion that there was nothing to it but Joey, and so expressed themselves.

Speigal, a southpaw, who has incurred the displeasure of the local fans for his dilatory tactics in other bouts, seems to have taken a new lease on his fistic life. He was at his best last night against a dangerous puncher, who never got a good sock at him, so clever and active today did Joey [illegible]

JOEY IMPROVED BOXER

Joey seemed to be mightily improved as a result of almost weekly campaigning since he returned to action following his long layoff and had the fans rooting for him all the way. He was so far ahead that he coasted in during the final round. Judge Phil Scalo voted for him but Judge L. K. Mehringer and Referee Red Robinson both called the bout a draw. Speigal weighed 147¼ pounds against 134¾ for his opponent.

The less said about the main bout of 10 rounds between Mose Butch, of Oakland, and Nat Litfin, of the Hill, featherweights, the better. For five rounds it resembled a waltz, with Butch unable to get the range and Litfin circling about the ring trying vainly to counter. From the sixth round on, Butch managed to score often enough to win the decision with Litfin confining his efforts to throwing a couple of good rights in the final round.

This was supposed to be a grudge fight. If it was, 'tis well that most of the fighters are at least on speaking terms. Butch weighed 124½ pounds and Litfin 121¾.

ASTO WHIPS SENICH

Don Asto, Uniontown lightweight, won all of the way over Steve Senich, of Homestead, in the second bout and Young Barry, Kittanning Negro, bested Jack Dalcherone, Springdale middleweight, in the opener, although the latter got the referee's decision, with the judges disagreeing.

Miller Says Irish Try Too Hard For Own Good

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The trouble with Notre Dame's faltering football team, as Edgar E. (Rip) Miller, Navy coach, sees it, is altogether psychological. He said:

"Instead of playing cool, collected football they are trying too hard, both for themselves and for Hunk Anderson."

He pointed to the fumbles and mistakes in the pinches Saturday when Navy, although rushed off its feet in midfield and almost pushed about at will, [illegible] a brilliant 7-to-[illegible] victory [illegible] Notre Dame team.

"The Notre Dame backs hit fast and hard, and it took from four to five Navy players to pull them down time and time again. They have a fine blocking line and co-ordinate for first down after first down until they begin to smell a touchdown. Then the team as a whole asserts itself and the mechanical mistakes begin."

Voters at the polls in today's election are asked to vote Yes or No on the amendment which will permit Sunday sports in the various communities by setting aside the Sunday Blue Laws which now prohibit such pastime and recreation.

If favorable acted upon, the amendment will permit Sunday sports between the hours of 2 and 6 p. m., or between 3 and 7 p. m., daylight saving time, during the summer months. The vote is on a local option basis, with ordinances to follow in the cities, towns and boroughs in the event of favorable votes.

A. A. U. TO GET 119 CLAIMS FOR NEW MARKS

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Despite some sensational performances, record-breaking feats in the sports of track and swimming fell off nearly 50 per cent this year, according to the list of records prepared for submission to the annual convention of the Amateur Athletic Union at Pittsburgh November 10-11.

Claims have been filed for 119 records, as compared with 234 in 1932 when the Olympic Games sent the list soaring. Thirty-nine marks are credited to women athletes.

MEDICA TOPS LIST

Jack Medica, Seattle star who holds the national 440 and 880-yard swimming championships, heads the list of individual record-breakers, with applications for 10 new marks in free-style competition. His nearest rivals are Katherine Rawls, all-round swimming champion from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., with six records, and Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette Negro and national sprint champion, with five.

Jack Lovelock, the Oxford student from New Zealand who stepped to a world record of 4:07.6 for the one-mile run in beating Princeton's Bill Bonthron last July, is the only foreign star on the record list. When his mark is approved, it will be passed on to the International Amateur Athletic Union for approval as the

ALLEGHENY C. C. TO REVISE COURSE

By TOM BIRKS

Golfers of the district, familiar with the present layout of the Allegheny Country Club golf course, are going to see many changes when the 1934 season gets under way. Greenskeeper John Pressley, with 30 workmen, and the architectural assistance of Donald Ross, is working on changes that will make par as tough as any course in the district.

With a watering system installed, the famous Sewickley Heights links, always a beautiful layout, will once again take its place as one of the finest golf courses in the world.

NO. 1 TO STAND

The No. 1 fairway and green probably will be the only ones not to undergo any changes, but beginning with the No. 2 green, all bunkers, traps and greens are to be changed about.

The No. 3 green is being elevated, pushed farther back into the woods. Traps are being added to the wide open fourth green, and then crossing the road, No. 5 green is being planned in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth holes. Seventeen has long been a bug bear and probably will be changed to a short hole.

Sixteen will be lengthened, the eighteenth tee will also be pushed back, making it a two wood shot hole.

Very few changes, if any, have been made in the layout of the Sewickley Heights club over a period of 10 years, and up-to-date golf courses have many developments which were not in vogue when courses were built more than a decade ago.

COURSE NOT EASY

Par was never very easy to beat at Allegheny. Practically all of the women starts that played in the Allegheny invitation tournament had lower scores in the women's national championship qualifying round at Chicago.

The Tri-state Golf Course Superintendents' Association will hold its annual dinner and meeting next Monday in the Aero clubrooms of the William Penn Hotel. Bill Key, greenskeeper at the Longue Vue Country Club, is president, and John Quaill, greenskeeper at the Highland Country Club, is secretary.

At this get together plans will be laid for the national convention to be held in Pittsburgh in January.

Fight Results

At Moose Temple—Mose Butch defeated Nat Litfin, 10 rounds; Joey Speigal and Anson Green drew (referee's decision), 6 rounds; Don Asto defeated Steve Senich, 6 rounds; Jack Dalcherone won referee's decision over Kid Barry, 6 rounds.

RIVAL ELEVENS OPEN DRILLS FOR GAME

By JESS CARVER

They'll tell you that only two things are certain in this vale of tears, death and taxes, but it begins to look as if there is another certainty looming, for this week at least. Unless everything goes wrong between now and game time, the greatest crowd ever to witness a football clash between district elevens appears sure to take in the Pitt-Duquesne battle in the Pitt Stadium Saturday afternoon.

Every factor points to a turnout of at least 50,000 for the struggle. Coupled with the fact that the game is one of the most hunky-dory contests on the Eastern card for the day, the fact that the city will be celebrating the Armistice Day anniversary is bound to add to the gate. It is not without the realm of the possible that the Stadium record will go by the boards.

GAME TO DRAW

When the game was booked for the November 11 date, the Panther officials came in for a bit of a panning, many of the boys figuring the Panthers should have carded a prominent out of town eleven for the date. But now, there isn't a team in the country, save possibly Southern California or the Army, that could be depended upon to draw the crowd the Dukes will pull in as they essay to continue their brilliant string of triumphs at Pitt's expense.

The Dukes are being held in no small regard against Pitt, and they deserve, it too, but unfortunately for the Bluffites, the Panthers are taking the game very seriously. The Golden Cats have been only impressed by the way in which the Dukes have been stepping along, and will be "up" for the game.

The rivals opened their [illegible] training drives for the embroglio yesterday. Pitt, with all hands in tip-top physical condition, held a long workout on its practice field. The Panthers have lost only two November games since Coach Jock Sutherland came here in 1924 and have not been beaten by an Eastern opponent since 1928, two records they mean to keep intact.

MUST STOP DELUCA

Coach Sutherland is primarily concerned in constructing a defense against Al DeLuca's passing and Art Strutt's running. DeLuca has been able to pass successfully against every opponent the Dukes have met this fall. He isn't a great passer, but he's a consistent one, and in Capt. Al Krankota and Fullback Zaninelli, he has an ace-pair of receivers at which to throw.

Strutt is as hard and fast a running back as the Panthers have faced all fall, or for that matter, since they stacked up against Nebraska's Mister Sauer a year ago. Running from the right halfback position, he'll naturally have to do most of his galloping at the right side of the Pitt line, the side guarded by Messers. Skladany, Walton and Onder, and the records will show that that side of the Pitt wall has been poison to all manner of opposition for the past two years.

Coach Elmer Layden predicts his Dukes will lose by three touchdowns. He has a high regard for the Pitt line, which, he says, was tough enough to bend. Notre

LANGLEY GAME REAL TEST FOR SOUTH HILLS

BODIE'S ELEVEN OUT TO STOP LEADERS

By JULIUS LEVIN

Needing a victory over Langley High School to clinch the Section II championship of the City League, the pace-setting South Hills eleven has a double incentive to spur it on in its important contest with the Bodie-coached machine at Langley Field Friday afternoon.

Langley, while its record in the Section II race this season is not an impressive one, always manages to put up a great game against the Tunnelites. The Bodie eleven last season defeated the Tunnelites, 12-0, and the Mazeski boys hope to gain revenge for that setback.

HUNKELE STAR END

While Langley does not have a spectacular team, there are several performers who have shown exceptionally good football in the early games of the season. Coach Bodie has developed a sterling end in Robert Hunkele, who has been improving with each game. He is going to bear watching in the battle with South Hills.

Speaking of ends, South Hills has a pair in Schindler and Maren that compares with the best in the City League. The work of this sterling duo in the battle with Carrick High last Friday played an important part in South Hills' one-sided victory over Ted Lyons' eleven.

South Hills, despite the fact that Langley does not boast an impressive record, is taking Friday's game seriously. Coach Mazeski, for one, believes his team played far over its head against Carrick, it being one of those days when a team does everything right. He hopes it will show the same form Friday.

PEABODY NEAR TITLE

While South Hills will be striving to clinch its eighth championship in Section II, Peabody, leader in Section I, will be battling Schenley at Schenley in a game that will determine the titleholder in that division. Peabody is the real "dark-horse" in the City League race this season. It has been putting on more pressure with each game and is a big favorite to defeat Schenley as the Oaklanders scored their first points of the season against the weak Fifth Avenue eleven.

The two schools have been staunch rivals for a number of years. In 1931 the schools waged a scoreless deadlock, while last season Peabody triumphed by a 13-6 score.

Other games in the City League Friday find Allderdice at Westinghouse and Oliver at Perry. Two City League schools play outside contests, Fifth Avenue being the attraction at Mt. Lebanon, while Carrick is at Brentwood.

Scott High, of North Braddock, having concluded its regular class A schedule by eliminating Duquesne, winds up its season with a non-league contest with Erie Strong Vincent at North Braddock Friday night. This game has no bearing on the championship race.

Little importance is attached to the four class AA games scheduled Saturday inasmuch as only one of the three undefeated elevens is scheduled to play. Greensburg entertaining Monessen at Greensburg.

LEADERS FACE TESTS

The remaining two contenders in the class A race, however, face important tasks. Ambridge, defending champion, seeks its seventeenth straight victory by opposing Midland at Ambridge, while Monongahela stakes its hopes for the class A crown in its battle with California. Both games will be played Saturday.

M'PHAIL NEW REDS' PREXY

International News Service.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 7.—An ambitious dream was realized today by Larry (Red) MacPhail, former president of the Columbus Redbirds, of the American Association.

He became president of a major league baseball club—the Cincinnati Reds, of the National League—under an agreement extending over the next three years.

MacPhail assumed active charge of the Redlegs today, succeeding Sidney Weil, who withdrew from the Cincinnati Baseball Club when control of the organization was taken over by the Central Trust Company, which has held his stock, amounting to slightly more than 50 per cent, as collateral for the last three years.

With the elevation of MacPhail, whose career as head of the Columbus club in the American Association was short and stormy, as president of the Cincinnati Baseball Club, it was expected that a "new deal" will be written for the Redlegs.

Whether or not there will be a change in the management of the club was a matter of speculation, however.

EXPLANATIONS ON RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE SCOTCH DIVINITY—Merdoch was the ancient God of Light venerated by the Assyrians, Babylonians and Persians. The name is pronounced exactly like the name of the great Scottish engineer, William Murdoch (1754-1839), the inventor of coal gas for illuminating purposes. When the Persian Shah Nasered-din visited London, in 1873, he was greatly impressed by the gas illumination in his suite. He expressed a wish to inspect the gas works, where he learned to hs astonishment the name of the inventor. The king suggested that the Scotsman was obviously a reincarnation of the ancient Persian deity of Light. A picture of William Murdoch was carried away by the Shah. It later was enshrined in the royal palaces of Teheran and Kaser Kadjar and figured as a divinity in the religion of the Suffi sect of Persia. THE NATIONAL BALLET SKIRT—At the gala performance of the French Opera given in honor of the Persian Shah's visit to Paris in 1873, the ruler was so delighted with the "Ballet of the Enchanted Tower" in the opera "La Juive" that he procured a ballet skirt worn by one of the chorines. Upon his return to Persia the ballet skirt was made the national costume of Persia, which every Persian lady was obliged to wear. This has been the national style ever since.

CONNIE MACK SIGNS PAIR OF ROOKIES

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Rumor and report having traded most of his star performers to other clubs without his knowledge, Connie Mack began to build up the Philadelphia Athletics for the 1934 campaign.

He announced that Raymond Radcliffe, outfielder and left-hand batter of the St. Paul club of the American Association, will be with his team next year. In return Mack is sending Pitchers Gowell Claset and Tony Freitas and some cash to St. Paul.

Mack also announced that he has decided to give the Toledo club of the American Association Joe Zapustis, formerly of Fordham University, for George Detore, infielder.

SET FOR PRESENT

Mack said there would be no further announcement of deals for the present. Last week he denied that Lefty Grove, Mickey Cochrane, Max Bishop and other players have been sent to other clubs.

It has been reported that Cochrane is to go to the Detroit club as manager. It is believed that if Mack has any major trades in mind they will not be announced until the winter meeting of the leagues in New York next month.

About the only player that rumor has not mentioned recently is Jimmy Fox, major league home run champion and leading batter of the American League. Foxx is to be given a dinner tonight by the home folks at Sudlersville, Md.

BOOSTS RADCLIFFE

Manager Mack said:

"I believe we have picked up a promising young outfielder in Radcliffe. He has only been playing baseball about three years. Last season he was selected on the all-star American Association team. He started in the Texas League. Ira Thomas and my son, Earl, scouted him and liked his looks."

Mack also had a good word for Detore as an all-around infielder. He formerly played with Cleveland, Buffalo in the International League and last season with Toledo.

Dempsey to Referee Shea-Arizmendi Go

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey has been selected to referee the fight tonight at the Olympic Stadium between Eddie Shea, Chicago veteran, and Baby Arizmendi, of Mexico.

As the two fighters went through final workouts today the odds settled down to 10 to 7 in favor of Shea, who predicted a knockout victory well short of the 10 rounds scheduled.

The Pittsburgh Pirates football team, of the National Professional League, which meets the Brooklyn team in the first Sunday game at Forbes Field next Sunday, is working on arranging two other Sunday games before lowering the curtain on the season.

An attempt will be made to bring Warren Heller's Reading Professionals here for a game on November 26, and plans are under way for a benefit game to be played December 17.

A crowd of 25,000 is expected to attend next Sunday's game, following the Pirates' victory over Boston at Boston a week ago and the 3-3 tie with Brooklyn last Sunday.

WINOOKA FIRST CHOICE FOR RACE TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Despite the prospect of poor racing conditions, the crack Australian sprinter, Winooka, ruled an even money favorite to win the $2,000 international six-furlong dash, featuring the United States Racing Association's meeting at Belmont Park today.

Victor in his last two starts in Maryland, Winooka looked superior to all his three prospective rivals, Mrs. James M. Austin's Good Advice, John Simonetti's Sergt. Byrne and J. Simon Healy's Flying Heels. Neither Sgt. Byrne, a 2-year-old, nor Flying Heels, once rated one of the country's leading sprinters, previously had faced the big invader. Winooka twice beat Good Advice in Maryland.

Winooka and Flying Heels were to pack 120 pounds each against 117 for Good Advice and 101 for Sergt. Byrne.

And now—scientific tests prove that tire "broken in" during wet, cold weather average 30% more total mileage.

Hot summer roads make tires wear faster. Using your brakes on hot dry roads is like holding them against a whirling grindstone.

But roads are cool in winter—and most of the time they're wet. That means danger when your tires are thin and worn. But it means protection for stout new rubber, because the water prevents rapid wear by preventing friction between the tire and the road.

Think that over, and ask yourself—can you afford to wait till spring when new Goodyear Pathfinders are still selling today at prices just about the same as they cost a year ago?

Not on your life! The wise thing—and the thrifty thing for you to do is to get new Goodyears Now!

ROSE TOURNEY GAME TEAMS DISCUSSED

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The sports world scanned the football horizon today and buzzed Rose Tournament talk, but Southern California, probably the West's leading candidate, to participate in the discussion.

The Trojans are interested enough in defending the West's honors for the third consecutive season, but they have too much to worry about through the remainder of the schedule—Stanford, Oregon, Notre Dame, Georgia and Washington — without raising their sights to January 1, 1934.

TROJANS NOT "IN"

Of course, the Trojans are not in. There are Oregon and Oregon State among the West's undefeated. One may be eliminated Saturday when these two teams stage their traditional battle.

The West seems more interested, however, in the eligible Eastern candidates, with Army, Princeton, Duke, Michigan, Nebraska and Purdue most frequently mentioned.

Army probably would be first choice if the political strings could be pulled to bring the Cadets West, and provided Harvard, Penn Military, Navy and Notre Dame are beaten.

Princeton, with Dartmouth, Navy, Rutgers and Yale to meet, also would be highly satisfactory with the Pacific Coast's football fans, provided the Tigers would be willing.

Western Conference alumni already are active in their efforts to get permission for a post season game from the faculty representatives of the Big Ten for either Michigan or Purdue, but after what happened last year when Southern California refused to await sanction for Michigan any longer and picked Pittsburgh, the chances appeared slim.

NEBRASKA LIKED

Nebraska, with a tough assignment ahead in taking care of Kansas, Pittsburgh and Iowa, has received more than passing attention and many believe the Cornhuskers if they go through unbeaten, would stand more than an even chance if Army and Princeton cannot be reckoned with when the time comes.

No representative of the Big Six ever played in the Rose Bowl.

Chillysauce

—By Chilly Doyle—

Passage of the Sunday sports measure today probably would see the first Sunday baseball game at Forbes Field, an event of next April, with the Washington Senators as the piece de resistance. The Pirates owners are said to have negotiated with the American League champions with a Sunday exhibition contest in view.

With Joe Cronin in command, the colorful Senators would be a big drawing card in this city. Joe really has a great ball club. The Senators were not very hot in the scraps with the Giants, but no club can show to an advantage while in a batting slump. Over a long series, the Cronin entry probably would smack down Memphis Bill's club.

Honus Wagner is going like 60 these days as he looks forward to his sixtieth milestone along life's highway. His return to the diamond has been a big thing for the Flying Dutchman. Honus doubtless would shine as a manager were he given the opportunity to lead a club. He's about two full jumps ahead of the average player in strategy.

Did you know that Wagner invariably figured out every possible combination on a batted ball before the hitter connected? When one realizes this truth, Honus reputation for throwing the ball always to the right spot is not much of a mystery. A lot of shortstops of the present era wait until the ball is smacked before they decide what is to be done and oftimes while figuring they miss the rocket.

It looks like a lucky year for the Ryan boys. Blondy, the Giant, stole the show in the World Series, and now comes Marty, the honest coal digger, with enough stuff on his fast one to throw a scare into the H. C. Frick team.

If George Gibson wants to give Pirate fans a Christmas gift let him swing a deal for a pitcher who can deliver 20 victories in the 1934 campaign. Gibby wishes to do his shopping early and with this idea in mind he will attend the minor league meeting scheduled for this month in Galveston. The Pirate pilot will remain at his daughter's home in San Antonio until the pow wow begins.

'Alexander's Brother Succumbs on Coast

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Raymond S. Alexander, brother of Grover Cleveland Alexander baseball pitcher, died yesterday after an illness of more than a year from a heart ailment. He was 38 years old.

Raymond formerly played in the big leagues, appearing with Philadelphia in the National League in 1913. In 1921 he came West, entering the furniture business.

GRAPHIC GOLF

HAND AND WRIST ACTION

Tommy Armour had quite as many handicaps as the average golfer to overcome in his journey toward golfing fame. Wounded during the World War, he had a difficult time building his body into the high-geared scoring machine he is today. His nervousness at times made it difficult for him to hit the ball. But perseverance won and his example should be a hope as well as a lesson to countless duffers who have nearly given up hope of ever improving their game.

For instance, Armour developed his grip and wrist power so that now he has perhaps the strongest hands in the professional field.

A strong grip, particularly in the left hand, is important, for this hand does the major portion of the work in the actual swing. In the above illustration, Armour's right wrist and forearm is adding power just before impact, yet the left is performing its necessary functions and in no danger of collapse.

The wrists, of course, are supple and allowed to remain this way by the strong grip, which maintains its main pressure with the last two fingers of the left hand, the forefinger and thumb of the right.

With all fingers gripping the club tightly the wrists would be stiff and unwieldy.

RECORD CROWD TO SEE FRAY

The Dukes called the roll yesterday and found only one man absent, Jim McDonald being on the hospital list with a badly twisted ankle, suffered in the game with Wash-Jeff on Saturday.

LINE WORRIES BACH

Line Coach Joe Bach is taking some pains to steady the center of his line particularly as regards to its defense against spinners. If Weisenbaugh or O'Dell or Sebastian get through like Holland did for Wash-Jeff, they'll be gone, and there will be no catching 'em from behind, such as was the case with the Prexie fullback. Weisenbaugh probably is the fastest backfield man in the distri and excels at getting through on spinners and fake reverses.

Denial was made by the Dukes today that they had received a "feeler" indicating they will be invited to play in the national championship East vs. West game to be instituted in Chicago, December 9, in the event they win over Pitt.

Tech will get down to serious work this afternoon for the game with Michigan State at East Lansing on Saturday. The Tartans were out yesterday for a light workout, merely to get some of the kinks taken out of the lads who took the battering in the game with Purdue.

Steve Trbovich, varsity center, suffered a badly bruised shoulder in the action with the Boilermakers, but will be available for duty this week, as will Lib Lewis, veteran end star.

Goal Lines

Max Pauley, Ohio State guard, has developed football's not such a bad game after all. He quit the team between halves of the Indiana game Saturday, saying he was disgusted. But he turned out for practice as usual yesterday.

For consistency, Art Brunl, Rutgers fullback, is recommended to the attention of all and sundry. Called upon to make three yards or less for first down on 19 occasions this year, Brunl hasn't failed yet. In fact, the only time he was thrown for a loss came when he tried something different, an end run.

The bear assurance that Princeton will finish the season unbeaten, as Dan Slaughter, Brown coach, see it, lies in the fact that the Tiger eleven is made up mostly of sophomores, he says.

There usually is a hectic atmosphere in the Bronx when the two big colleges, Fordham and New York University, meet on the football field, but the Saturday it will be a real holiday. And the respect of the Bronx Board of Trade Borough President Henry Bruckner has proclaimed an official holiday for the afternoon. Now the only task is for the 2,000,000 or so inhabitants of the Bronx to find places in the Yankee Stadium.

This week's game with Pennsylvania is Ohio State's third intersectional clash of the season and according to all the records it ought to bring another victory for the Buckeyes. Ohio State hasn't lost a game to an Eastern team since it dropped an 18-7 decision to Pittsburgh in 1929.

A warning to Georgia Bulldogs: Don't take it on the chin if Bobby Dodd doesn't get the extra point. He's only touchdown chart Curtis also has one to his credit for the year, a perfect record so far: eight chances and eight goals.

On the uncertain basis of comparative scores, Detroit should have an easy victory over Catholic University Saturday. Catholic has lost only to Holy Cross this season and Detroit handed the Crusaders their first setback of the season Saturday, 24-0.

Bucknell, something of an Eastern football power in recent years, finally is going to have a shot at intersectional honors. Furman which meets the Bisons Saturday, is Bucknell's first intersectional opponent since 1927.

TAYLOR RELEASED

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Zach Taylor, veteran catcher, who has been with the Chicago Cubs since July, 1929, has been unconditionally released, according to an announcement by John Sevy, second vice president of the club. Taylor spent six years with the Brooklyn club until traded, in 1927, to the Boston Braves.

FIVE ELEVENS IN BIG TEN TITLE RACE

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Michigan's Wolverines are yelping loudly at the door leading into the Big Ten football throne room, but five other teams still have an outside chance of foiling them and sneaking out the back way with the prize.

Stranger things than that have happened in the world of sport during 1933, a year characterized by one stunning upset after another. Hardly a branch of sport has escaped and the way football has been going such teams as Purdue, Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio State, and Illinois still can hope for all or a share of the title.

WOLVERINES LEAD

With 11 games out of a complete card of 28 left to be played, this was the situation along the Big Ten front today:

Michigan—Undefeated in three starts, Michigan has yet to play Iowa, Minnesota and Northwestern without a Saturday's rest.

Purdue—That tie game with Minnesota may rob Purdue of the title as an identical 7-all tie did last year against Northwestern. The Boilermakers, who have won two and tied one, have Iowa and Indiana yet to play in the Conference.

Minnesota—Probably no team has such a driving attack as Minnesota. The Gophers, with six sophomores who are bound to get better, have won one game, lost none and tied three, equalling the tie game record set by Chicago in 1924 when the Maroons won the title.

IOWA CARD TOUGH

Iowa—Iowa has probably the toughest remaining schedule — games away from home against Michigan and Purdue. The Hawkeyes have won two, lost one and tied none.

Ohio State—The Buckeyes lost their only game in three starts against Michigan, but appear to be improving each week. They invade Wisconsin and battle Illinois at Columbus in their remaining conference engagements.

Illinois—Fans are still feeling sorry for Illinois because the Illini have beaten Wisconsin and lost to Michigan in their only games and have three left, at Northwestern, Chicago at Illinois, and at Ohio State.

Fast Action Marks Amateur Ring Show

Charleroi May Join New Baseball Loop

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 7.—Believing Sunday baseball assured in Pennsylvania, Charleroi sportsmen today prepared to introduce a new professional baseball team as part of a tri-state class B loop which would include cities where former Middle Atlantic League clubs operated.

It was learned here today that a wealthy sponsor had offered to guarantee sufficient funds to make the league a success in the event of blue law repeal. Elmer Daily, president of the Middle Atlantic League, and Russell Hockenbury, secretary, conferred here today with leaders in the movement.

Pitt-Dukes Battle Lures 800 Mailmen

When Pitt's Golden Panthers and the Durable Dukes of Duquesne square off for their scrap at the Stadium Saturday, 800 of Uncle Sam's letter carriers will be on hand to watch the game from a special section.

Charles Sabo, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers and Postal Employes, made arrangements for the carriers' attendance at the game. He announced that Postmaster William M. Turner will be the guest of honor. The Letter Carriers' Band will accompany the group.

POLICIES AIDING TRADE URGED BY 'RIGHTS'

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The right wing economic advisors of the Administration emphasize the desirability of policies which will hearten business men and encourage investors.

Mr. Rukeyser

They start out with the assumption that there is a vast accumulated demand for capital goods. They are impressed with the estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board that perhaps $30,000,000,000 of such demand piled up during the depression period and is waiting for financing.

They believe that the blockade in the market for private capital—the bond market—can be broken by amending the Federal Security Act, and by achieving relative stability for the dollar under a quietly managed currency, and by the creation of securities, such as convertible bonds or bonds with stock purchase warrants, which are suitable hedges against the inevitable monetary and economic uncertainties inherent in the situation.

DEFLATIONARY SUGGESTION

The conservatives feel that the public works program from a standpoint of actual spending will come to a peak next summer. After the present program has been accomplished, they would announce a policy of curtailment of government expenses and of intended debt reduction after the next fiscal year. This is obviously a deflationary suggestion, but the proponents contend that the beneficient effect on public credit would be helpful to general recovery. In passing it should be noted, that similar advice was given to former President Hoover.

These conservatives are opposed to monetary inflation, but as an alternative will deal with the debt problem, suggesting drastic write-offs of values which have disappeared during the depression. In order to minimize the stress and strain on institutional investors, they would spread the write-offs over a period of years. Applied to the railroads, they argue that such cutting down of fixed debt charges would permit rate reductions, and would re-attract tonnage to the carriers which had been lost to competitive agencies. They point to the recent experience of Australia in dealing directly with the debt problem.

MENTAL RESERVATIONISTS

On the question of parity between agricultural and industrial prices, they concede that the current disequilibrium is bad, and would like to see the agricultural adjustment experiment succeed, though as conservatives they have strong mental reservations.

Pointing out that 62 per cent of the unemployment comes from the heavy industries—makers of capital goods—they place great reliance on the possibilities of reviving the bond market in order to finance the purchase of durable goods. They recognize that this cannot occur without a broad renaissance of confidence in the future. They believe that the public works program would be heightened in effectiveness if the government would follow the precedent in regard to steel rails, and beat down costs in the construction industry, thus stimulating emulation by private builders, who, they assert, are still deterred by prevailing high costs.

But conservatives in and out of the government service are not in a happy mood. They believe that the administration veers more to the left, and they believe that more drastic inflationary experiments will be undertaken.

SUGGESTS POOL

Business has been impeded by the seeping away of the working capital of numerous enterprises during four years of depression. One official here has privately suggested the creation of a capital pool by the banks, working in cooperation with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He thinks that a Federal Reserve capital system should be set up, which will cater to the capital or longer term needs of business.

In general, the conservatives lean to policies which were tried during the last administration. They believe, however, that if Mr. Hoover had let deflation take its course in 1930 and 1931 the country could have stood it, though it is no longer able. Consequently, they admit that some further artificialities must be attempted.

MOTORS PAYING 25C EXTRA

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Directors of General Motors Corporation declared an extra dividend of 25 cents on the common stock.

The regular quarterly payment of 25 cents a share was also voted.

Both the dividends are payable December 12 to holders of record November 15.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the company, said in a statement that the directors, recognizing the company's "unusually strong financial condition," thought it desirable to "do all possible to add to the purchasing power at this time and to support the efforts that are being made toward national recovery" and therefore voted the extra which will represent an additional disbursement of about $11,000,000 to approximately 350,000 stockholders.

The Chicago Board of Trade (Grain Pit) and the New Orleans Cotton Exchange will be open for their customary hours. Business will be resumed in all markets tomorrow.

WHEAT DROPS, RISES, SAGS

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Grain prices averaged lower early today, some accumulation of overnight selling orders was in evidence, and there was a noticeable lack of aggressive buying. Opening unchanged to ⅜ off, wheat afterward rallied somewhat, and then declined all around. Corn started ⅛-⅝ down, and subsequently sagged further.

Both wheat and corn soon slipped down more than a cent a bushel after persistent selling in small lots. Corn and oats followed wheat price changes. Provisions were easy.

Forbes

Institutional Advertising To Increase

—By B. C. FORBES—

IF SENSATIONAL price-slashing is stopped, as intended by NRA codes, appeals other than those based strictly on prices will have to be used by merchants, manufacturers and other sellers who aspire to win a generous share of business.

Mr. Forbes

I learn that several very large manufacturing companies are preparing to launch "institutional" advertising campaigns of magnitude.

WHY?

If buyers cannot obtain any substantial price concessions, they will naturally prefer the products of companies that best succeed in convincing the public that they are extremely high-grade, that they are insistent upon the finest quality, that their plants are run most efficiently, that they select and retain only employes of superior ability, that they pay better-than-average wages, that their work-folks take pride in their jobs and are inspired by a deep-rooted spirit of loyalty.

MANY CLASSES of merchandise are purchased unquestioningly because their producers have earned a national reputation for integrity. You or I may not be able to pass expert judgment on the merits of certain things to buy, but if we know they have been made (or are offered) by a concern which has convinced us, through persistent advertising, that its principles and policies and products are beyond criticism, we pay over our money feeling confident that we will not be disappointed, gypped.

There isn't a man or woman in America who would think it necessary to scrutinize any precious stone or piece of jewelry in Tiffany's to guard against being defrauded.

WHEN I want to buy clothes or shoes or hats or any other wear, I go to merchants who have established a reputation for probity, for dependability, for fair dealing, for giving the best quality possible for the price asked.

I enter such a store with a comfortable feeling. I have the utmost confidence that I will get a square deal. There is something appealing in the very atmosphere of such an establishment.

Similarly, when I enter a hotel or a restaurant which has built up a fine reputation, I feel safe. I have no qualms as to cleanliness or the quality of the food served. I enjoy not having to be on guard.

ISN'T IT true, when you reason it out, that what most of us buy is not merchandise, but names, reputations?

MANY OF America's enterprises now manufacture more than one article. Even steel companies no longer confine their activities to turning out common-or-garden pig iron or steel.

They have learned that there is profit in specialization. Therefore, they make distinct products, either special alloys or fashioned goods.

Electric manufacturing companies do not confine their output to turbines, motors or other things sold only to power companies or factories. They, too, have learned that there is profit in specialization. Therefore, they spend vast sums on research and now offer various varieties of finished articles for the public.

INSTEAD, therefore, of attempting to make each and every product known in every corner of the continent, there is going to be greater effort than ever before to inspire absolute faith in the companies themselves, in the actual makers of the products.

This form of advertising, called "institutional," is on the eve of unprecedented expansion, stimulated to some extent by the changes brought about by the operation of NRA codes, with their limitations on price-cutting.

DEPARTMENT stores, specialty stores and other retailers doubtless will likewise strive to enhance the reputation of their establishments, so that there will be developed among consumers a sense of security in buying anything offered.

Ditto underwriters, investment bankers, and others vending securities, also banks.

ALL THIS will make for wholesome, sound business.

GENERAL TRADE UPTURN NOT IN SIGHT

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Business activity seems to have receded a little further last week. While there is a possibility of stabilization around present levels, nothing has yet developed to suggest any general upturn.

Steel production declined again to about 25 per cent of capacity. Textile and shoe manufacturing activity declined. Lumber production was lower.

Electrical power production which reflects general activity, as well as domestic consumption, was off a little more than seasonally.

Most significant of all, railway carloading decreased more than normally and have now fallen back almost to the level of a year ago.

TRADE SHOWING POOR

Retail trade continues to fluctuate according to weather conditions but on the whole makes a disappointing showing. Many merchants have accumulated rather large inventories and some went in for high-priced merchandise to a doubtful extent.

After all, the average individual member of "The Public" has very little money to spend and business must be adjusted to this condition.

Bank clearings at the various centers were much mixed but the significant fact is that outside of New York City, the average was no higher than a year ago.

ELEMENTS NOT HELPFUL

Of course the growing confusion concerning NRA and the "farm strike" coming on top of various labor strikes, are not helpful. And the uncertainty as to monetary policy remains a great drawback.

Despite the new gold-purchase policy, commodity prices did not rise last week. Some speculative markets, notably silver, responded, but the average for the week was down a little. Corn was up on government price pegging, but rye and oats slumped. So did lard and pork, copper and zinc.

Gold buying is not apt to have much effect on our domestic commodity prices unless done on a large scale in foreign markets and that would probably be so disturbing to foreign exchange rates that it will not be attempted.

FLIGHT FROM DOLLAR

The present conditions of business is due to two immediate factors:

1—The renewed uncertainty as to government activities, including monetary policy, and a "flight" from the dollar (largely to the pound). Business sentiment has not responded well to psychological treatment this time.

2—The deflation of the "inflation" of last summer. The overstimulation of "fear buying" and speculation on anticipated inflation, has resulted in the expected reaction.

To the extent that the slump is just a natural reaction from the unwarranted summer spurt, we may be hopeful that it will not go much further. The "correction" may soon be completed, and business become stabilized and ready for sounder expansion.

UNCERTAINTY GROWS

But the uncertainty factor remains, and it is impossible to see clearly what can be done about it. What is to be done with the gigantic NRA machine?

At the same time that we read of belated NRA parades in some eastern towns, we also read of farm strikes against it, talk of substituting the "Swope plan," and the Wall street view that it is "a flop."

Above all, the money question is as much a question as ever. This makes investment and business plans impossible, because of uncertainty as to the value of the dollar.

If we give people money, they will buy things, but then producers find their costs raised. If we cheapen money it may help debtors, but it hurts creditors and they won't make new loans except at big premiums to offset an anticipated decline in dollars.

So even after the over-production and speculative buying of the summer are "corrected," we will still have to deal with the uncertainty factor before sound business recovery can occur.

New Mine Troubles May Develop In Future

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

NEARLY ALL the striking coal miners have returned to work, but this may not mark the end of troubles in the industry.

Agreement to end the strike was reached with the condition that miners be given an opportunity to vote by secret ballot on the organization which is to represent them in negotiations with the operators. The workers are to be given a chance to decide whether they want company unions, the United Mine Workers or insurgent labor organizations as representatives.

In cases where the United Mine Workers or some other union secure complete predomination in the selection of the workers, little difficulty is to be expected. But in cases where there is a close division in the election, trouble may develop.

Each Mine to Make Independent Choice

THE COMING MINE elections are not to cover the entire industry. The choice is to be made independently at each mine. It is impossible to predict the exact outcome of these elections. It is highly probable that the United Mine Workers will enjoy landslides at a great majority of properties. But at some mines it is considered probable that company unions or insurgent unions will have minorities too substantial to ignore or that they actually may have majorities.

In such cases the operators will have two sets to representatives to deal with in settling labor disputes. There always are plenty of obstacles to the settlement of labor disputes when the leaders of a single organization are sitting across a table from employers. But when two or more hostile factions must be conciliated, the obstacles will be greatly increased.

New Strikes May Result

ADDED TO THE difficulties occasioned by reaching agreements with warring labor factions, may be the unwillingness of the workers adhering to one organization to work alongside of those adhering to another.

Strikers are considered quite likely to result from situations where no organization is sufficiently strong to have complete dominion of workers at a single mine.

The Girl Who Won

By MAY CHRISTIE

Nollie and some of the guests in the big house in Westchester crowded around the crackling wood fire while the "seeress" told their fortunes.

"One by one, please. I play no favorites. Rhoda Vane, you're out of turn."

"O-oh, such an interesting, clever hand! And I see money here—and love!"

"Naturally," commented one of the men, "considering the young lady's looks, isn't that logical sequence?"

"Certain women will never like you," proceeded the fortune-teller, paying no attention to the interruption, "blondes particularly will never take to you, because of your success."

"What kind of success?" asked Nollie softly, skeptical but curious. She was a little embarrassed at this unusual attention focused on herself.

From such a smart crowd, too. Ah! she was in a new "milieu."

"Success with men, my dear," explained the seeress amiably. "Gentlemen may prefer blondes, as a rule, but when you come along, they're out . . . and there's one in particular in your hand right here who won't like it at all."

A DARK MAN

"A blonde?" inquired a bystander.

"Yes. She'll make trouble for this girl if she gets half a chance to."

"Over a man, needless to say?"

"Of course."

"Curiously enough," proceeded the prophetess, scanning Nollie's palm, "there have been mighty few men in your young life, to date. But you have a very strong attraction for them. You just wait."

A pause. Then: "Your life has changed tremendously quite recently. See that sharp twist in your fortune line. And it's going to change again quite soon. You're in for an interesting, not to say a strenuous time of it."

"There's a dark man, too, coming into your life. But you don't always get your proper cues. You're uncertain what to do—not sure enough of yourself."

"And what SHOULD I do?" asked Nollie timidly, but much interested.

"Grab what the gods give, and don't permit other people interfering. And where women are concerned, don't trust them too much."

"And what about money coming to me?" Nollie was still skeptical.

"Oh, money's not in your immediate future, but it's in your hand, all right. After a variety of ups and downs, you'll win," conceded the palmist.

Again Rhoda Vane thrust herself forward.

"If you can't take me now, I'm going off to play poker."

BLONDE DISSATISFIED

Nollie withdrew, giving the tall blonde her chair. Rhoda did not even thank her.

The nice boy said to Nollie: "Wait. Let's hear what the fortune-teller has to say about HER hand. I bet it'll be spicy."

Apparently it was. So much so that the palmist whispered some of the items to Rhoda.

The tall blonde tittered. She said: "I'm not ashamed of anything. You can speak out loud."

"Well, you've a nerve! I've never seen such a collection of men and—shall we say flirtations?—in any one palm!"

"And what of that? Aren't we put into the world to have a good time?"

"Oh, several of them," conceded she, "but I think there's one too many for your peace of mind. And right there you'll meet your Waterloo!" Everybody laughed.

"If I take a fancy for anyone—which I seldom do, if the truth were known—you betcha life he falls for me," she claimed arrogantly.

"Now, now—a dare to fate," chided one of the group, "you're tempting the high gods when you talk that way, Rhoda."

"I always get what I want, if I want it hard enough. But I'm rather blase, if the truth be told."

"That so? Then have a care. Don't set your heart on any one man too much, or he may slip out of your fingers."

Rhoda was nettled. She withdrew her hand. She rose. "It's all bunk, this foretelling the future anyhow,' she said peevishly.

She came over to the two men who were standing with Nollie.

"Come on and get up a poker game. This kind of a jamboree bores me."

Next morning Mrs. Judson and Nollie and the chauffeur and the car were on the road betimes.

INTERESTED IN NOLLIE

The sun shone. The world was very green and fresh, for it had rained overnight. White clouds drifted on the horizon.

"You'd quite a 'grand success' at the party," commented the widow. "That fair-haired lad—Tommy What's-his-name—was trying to pump me about you."

"So?" Nollie flushed a little.

"Oh, yes. He said he thought you the prettiest girl he'd ever seen. And he fished for an invitation to Redwood."

"You didn't give it to him?" Nollie startled.

"Well, that kind of a youth will always do what he wants to do. He's got a couple of cars. I daresay he'll drop in."

"There'll be nobody but ourselves and the servants to begin with. I'll be glad of a rest," confessed Mrs. Judson.

The drive was glorious along the asphalt roads that led to the Canadian border. Presently, as the sun grew hotter, there was an enchantig odor of pine and balsam.

On purred the car. Tall trees cast shade over the route. Ferns and wild roses edged its borders.

They stopped at an inn for lunch. Suddenly Mrs. Judson said, tentatively: "What do you think I've gone and done! I've invited that Rhoda Vane to Redwood for a week! I didn't want to, but it seems there's a man in the vicinity she's crazy about—so she persuaded me against my better judgment."

Synopsis

Nollie Day, stenographer at an exclusive hotel, is befriended by wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. Nollie goes to a theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Nollie wants to clear her identity, but is unable to get in touch with Tony. Nollie secures a new position as secretary to Jack Brilling, of Galbraith & Co. Miss Galbraith, Brilling's fiancee, is jealous and warns Nollie. Mrs. Judson returns and gives Nollie a letter Tony had written her abroad. They learn that Tony is on vacation. Mrs. Judson asks Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch. Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane. Rhoda seems to dislike Nollie.

Now Go On

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When walking or standing, place the foot so that the inside of the great toe will be on a line straight ahead. Pointing toes outward weakens tendons, pulls unnaturally on the muscles of the legs, is responsible for all manner of foot ills. Don't, if you would be happy, crowd your shoes too full of feet. Give them an opportunity to get a firm hold on the pavement. See that there is sufficient space for movement of the toes; when you huddle them together corns result and other horrors, too.

Looking healthy, tanned and robust boosts daytime attire, but almost any gal likes to appear chiffony and fragile in the evening when the festive party is going strong. So she uses a powder of lighter shade, and a brighter rouge, tints her eyelids with subtle coloring, assumes the exotic role. It's almost impossible to get along these days without several shades of powder, different lipsticks. The color of frock and hat must be considered. Especially if they happen to be red.

GEN. LEE SURRENDERS TO GEN. GRANT (Appomattox, April 9, 1865)

Early in 1865 the "anaconda tactics" of the Unionists (squeezing, crushing) brought them final success. On April 2, Petersburg fell; the next day, Richmond, Va., the Confederate capital. Gen. Lee moved westward and was pinched between Gen. Sheridan's and Gen. Grant's armies. He surrendered. Scattered divisions were soon subdued, the last the Trans-Mississippi Army, on May 26, 1865. Thus, after four years of shedding brothers' blood, the Union was saved. (United States History)

THE BLACK WALNUT (Juglans Nigra)

With about 40 species, it belongs to the walnut family (Juglandaceae). Its leaves are alternate, almost sessile, serrate. Staminate flowers in unbranched catkins, pistillate in 2-5 flowered spikes; both on same tree. Fruit is round, sculptured nut with fleshy indehiscent covering and edible, oily kernel. Range: Minnesota to Florida. It grows on rich, deep, moist soil, requiring much light. The black walnut is valuable for fruit and timber. Its wood is rich dark brown, durable, hard, strong, used for furniture, musical instruments, machine-parts and firearms. (General Science)

FRENCH ARMY ACCLAIMS NAPOLEON RETURNED FROM ELBA

The disaster of the Grand Army in Russia (1812) encouraged Prussia, Russia, Sweden, Great Britain, Austria and Spain to a united drive against Napoleon. Successful at first, he was defeated decisively at Leipzig, in the "Battle of the Nations" (1813). Retreating, Napoleon gathered a new army, only to be defeated again on several fronts, the British Gen. Wellington and Russian Emperor Alexander entering Paris. Napoleon was forced to abdicate, ending his first reign (April 4, 1814). He received the island of Elba in the Mediterranean with the title Emperor.

Soon Napoleon escaped and, reappearing among his soldiers, was acclaimed with overwhelming devotion (March 15, 1815). (World History)

LEONTES: "LET NO MAN MOCK ME, FOR I WILL KISS HER" (The Winter's Tale)

Leontes, King of Sicily, persecutes upon unfounded suspicion, Queen Hermione and the Bohemian king, Polixenes, a guest. The latter flees. Hermione is imprisoned, becomes the mother of a daughter, Perdita, who is abandoned on Leontes' order. Hermione is tried; collapsing, she is carried away as dead, but saved from burial by Paulina, with whom she lives in secrecy. The only son dies in grief over his mother.

Perdita, found and reared as a shepherdess in Bohemia, is loved by Florizel, son of King Polixenes. They flee to Sicily before the royal wrath. Her features lead Leontes to investigate and to find in her the abandoned daughter. Paulina unveils a statue of Hermione, which—after Leontes' repentant adoration—steps from the pedestal!—Hermione herself. Polixenes' arrival adds to the general rejoicing. (English Literature)

CALCIUM, METAL OF THE ALKALINE EARTHS

Calcium (Ca) oxidizes in air, loosing its silvery color. It decomposes water forming hydroxide, liberating hydrogen: $Ca + 2H\text{-}2O = Ca(OH)2 + H2$.

I. Its atomic-structure, -number, -weight. The most abundant Ca compound, the carbonate ($CaCO3$) forms calcite—crystallized in hexagonal system—(2) and aragonite—in rhombic system—(3).

Calcite is chief constituent of bones, egg shells (together with calcium phosphate); in massive form it occurs as marble, limestone, calc-spar, Iceland-spar (transparent), chalk (4), which consists of shells of minute marine organisms and dolomite (calcium and magnesium carbonate). Aragonite is found in shells of moluscs and in corals.

Lady Godiva Wins Race on Foot

It is with our usual incorporated modesty and industrial coyness that we report our famed Century of Progress wound up as a mess of ostrich feathers.

The ostrich plumage was a beautiful fan waved with grace and dexterity by a little lady in Chicago. It proved to be the sensation of the optimistic centennial.

The little lady did a dance with her fan. She waved it to and fro in a light northwestern hurricane. And all she wore was a pair of spiked shoes so she wouldn't slip on the soap.

We are sorry to say that we saw her do her fan gavotte. Compared to her attire we hand the laurels to the Mahatma and Gunga Dhin as the world's fanciest dressed couple.

Reform societies rushed to arms and the chief of police threatened her with exposure. She continued to sway slowly in the breeze while the tourists galloped down from the metropolitan hills and all but the strongest and bravest ticket speculators were injured in the rush.

The result of the fan dance was that other and more ethical attractions suffered in attendance. Business is business. So they hired fan dancers too.

So many fan dancers wriggled and squirmed that aviators couldn't land in Chicago until a favoring wind blew the loose ostrich feathers out across Lake Michigan.

Gypsy fortune tellers, hot dog stands, three-card monte men, popcorn vendors and the tattooed ladies all became fan dancers. Tourists bought fans to take home with them and practice in the attic for the next Century of Progress.

The little lady who started it all grabbed herself a tour of the movie theaters. She played New York and the public mobbed the theater, tore up the seats, fainted in the aisles and forgot Booth, Irving, Melba, Lind, Terry, Bernhard and Michael Mouse.

It was all very lovely. But it slaps us with the distressing thought that future dramatic careers start and finish with the tail feathers of an ostrich.

Be Sure to Vote Today

The Polls Will Be Open Until 7 O'Clock This Evening

Every citizen should vote today.

If all who are eligible in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County went to the polls unfailingly on election day, we would have better grades of city and county government.

The controlled voters never fail to vote. It is the independent citizens who so frequently stay away from the polls, and they are the very ones whose votes are needed to improve the quality of municipal government.

There are four ballots for each voter—one for the city and county officials, one for the proposed constitutional amendments, one for the prohibition question, and one for the Sunday ball game question. See that you receive all four.

Vote as early as possible. The polls opened at 7 a. m. and will close at 7 p. m.

The Majority Decides

Ratification Method Chosen By Congress Has Speeded Prohibition Repeal.

Six states are voting on the question of repealing the prohibition amendment to the federal constitution—South Carolina, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Utah and Kentucky.

To amend the constitution, the proposed amendment must be adopted by a two-thirds vote of both houses of Congress and ratified by three-fourths of the forty-eight states of the union.

As thirty-three states have already voted their consent to the repeal amendment the affirmative action of only three of the six states voting today will complete its ratification.

For the speed with which the repeal amendment has been approved by the several states the ratification method which Congress directed the states to follow is chiefly responsible. As Postmaster General Farley truly says:

"The situation might have been very different if that provision of the repeal amendment which declares that ratification shall be by state conventions had not been promulgated.

"If the old custom of leaving it to the state legislatures had been followed we would have had to meet the handicap of a minority being able to control elections in legislative districts, and the whip would have been over the state legislatures in 1933 as it was in 1920.

"The conventions gave the whole voting population of the states a chance to have their will about their own affairs."

Mr. Farley goes too far, however, in saying that the convention method of voting repeal "is the finest demonstration of real popular government in our whole history."

That demonstration occurred when the question of ratifying the constitution itself was before the American people in 1788 and 1789. Then the state convention method was resorted to for much the same reasons that Congress directed its employment to get rid of the Eighteenth Amendment.

If future Congresses profit by the lesson of these two experiences the convention method of ratification will hereafter be employed whenever a proposed amendment to the constitution is submitted to the states for ratification.

In this way lies the best assurance that no organized minority will ever again thwart the will of the majority in so vital a matter as is that of changing the organic law of the nation.

A Job for Denny

The Public Safety Director Should Clean Up the Franklin School Neighborhood

Under the guidance of A. D. Brandon, former Morals Court magistrate, the Rev. Dr. M. B. Fuller, pastor of Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, made a tour of the Hill district the other night. They told at the Sunday evening service of the evidences of commercial vice that came under their observation.

Particularly disturbing is their report that there are 10 disorderly houses near the Franklin School.

This is an old, old complaint. The school authorities and the decent people of the neighborhod have been protesting for years against the flaunting of vice before the school children. The police have occasionally made a gesture to close these resorts, but it has been little more than a gesture.

Harmar D. Denny, Jr., director of public safety, is supposed to be the type of man who will take this report at Emory Church as a challenge.

There is a very clear-cut obligation upon him to close these resorts and see that they stay closed.

The City Sustains a Loss in the Departure of Dr. Goldenson for New York

Pittsburghers of all creeds will agree with what Marcus Aaron, president of Rodef Shalom congregation, said in announcing the acceptance of the resignation of Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson as rabbi, to permit him to accept a call to Temple Emanu-El, New York City.

Not only the congregation but the city will be the poorer for his going.

Dr. Goldenson has been an influence for good. His support and his eloquence have promoted many worth while causes. His voice has ever been raised for social justice and for civic betterment.

The vacancy will be hard to fill.

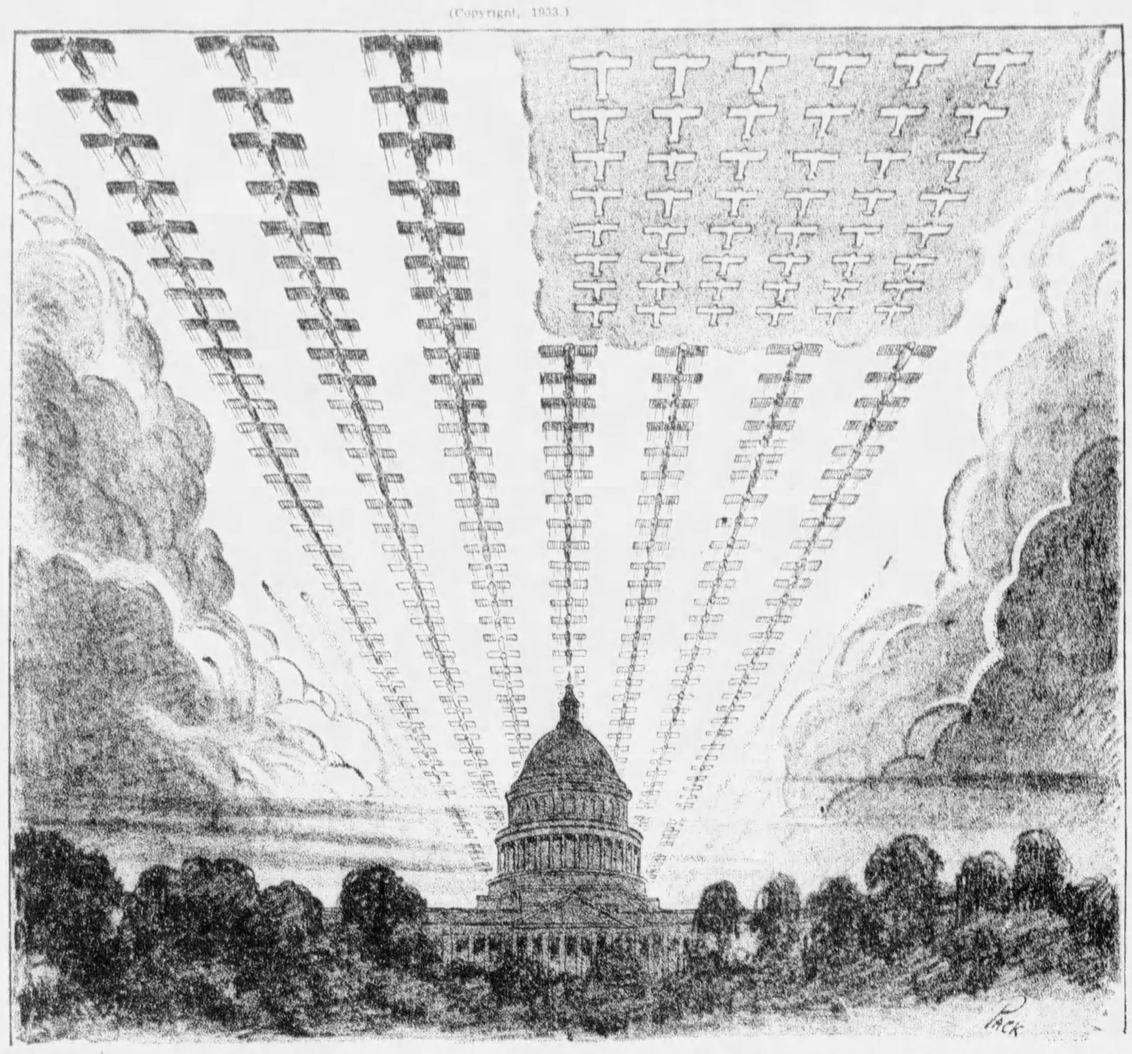
Keep the Flag in the Air!

(Copyright, 1933.)



As a part of the Roosevelt Administration's patriotic policy of providing adequately for the national safety, the Army Air Corps is second in importance to no other branch of the service.

Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, former Chief of the Army Air Corps, presented the facts recently in an article in the Hearst Sunday newspapers.

We have, he explained, 1,750 Army airplanes—but only 261 of these are "instantly available" for actual defense.

"These are scattered," commented Gen. Fechet. "They could be assembled at a threatened point within forty-eight hours. But even such a complete concentration, which would be dangerous—leaving important enemy objectives unprotected—would mean that we would be far inferior in effective air power to any enemy likely to attack us."

In the light of the facts, completion of the Army Air Corps' five-year plan is obviously a wise policy for the Federal Government to execute.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—New York of all places, has become suddenly Ozark conscious. A half dozen artists and more than a dozen writers of distinction are to pitch camp among primitive people of "the hollers and hills" next spring. So far it's been a literary fort held chiefly by Harold Bell Wright.

Not only is living cheap in this stronghold of a strange and vanishing Americanism, but the "local color" for both painter and novelist is unsurpassed. A further boon is the active interest just now of the Hollywood studios in lives of mountain folk.

Ozark dialect and folk-lore have never been properly tapped. Save for the exploitation of hill-billy bands and songs on the radio. The romance of the granny-doctors, the supersitions, woods colts, razor-backs and simplicities of creek living create an entirely new world for strangers, each of whom is "a furriner."

Natives, while still looking upon "book-larnin'" with suspicion, are not resentful of intrusion. So long as newcomers occupy the dirt-floor log cabins and don't go "boogerin' around a-huntin' stills" they are received hospitably. But breech-loading shotguns are still racked over doors!

Journalism cements few firm friendships. Chiefly it foments here-today-g o n e-tomorrow acquaintance. But there's one that endured the years. Fred Knowles was a blonde young managing editor of a paper upon which Burns Mantle was a critic. That was 20 years ago, but every Thursday since they have dinner together and if there is a "first night" attend a play.

Upper Madison avenue is to be graced by a beauty shrine in the shape of a five-story building occupied solely by those who cater to the complexion vanities of Milady—in the manner of the doctors and dentists spires. It will be known solely by a number.

Incidentally, to verify a point in a magazine article, I called one of those high-toned specialists in a doctor's building the other day. He is the spatted Van-dyked sort whose clientele is largely hearty hypochondriacs of feminine persuasion. A half dozen were in the waiting room, expensively dressed and as healthy-looking as a basketball team. Their hobby is illness, collecting mysterious pains as some collect antiques, and fairly gloating over unusual specimens. What they crave of course, is sympathy in a soft, silken voice, and they pay $25 a visit to receive it.

The Rialto's most glorious figure in a defeat the entire district hopes will be temporary is Charles B. Dillingham, in his prime among the aces of high class theatrical producers. For the past three years he has taken swing after swing to the chin without a whimper. In the sere and saffron of full years, he refuses, however, to be crushed. He attends many luncheons and dinners and is at every gathering of theatrical folk. And no one present is livelier or expresses a keener zest for life and what the future holds.

It strikes me, too, that New York's human cricket is George N. Armsby, the San Francisco and Manhattan banker. He fairly exudes buckitty-buckitty. I notice his club list in "Who's Who" occupies a paragraph reaching from here to here and ranges from San Francisco's Bohemian to those in New York, London and Paris and his list of directorates is equally long. Yet despite his load of responsibilities, he has time to attend many first nights, appear at important functions and do frequent turns of the golf course.

I am assailed by prickling qualms in passing those mumbling characters that shuffle vacant-eyed along sidewalks—bare-foot John the Baptists and other self-appointed righters of a world's wrongs. LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Over Forty? Are You Fit to Work?

Over forty? Are you fit to work? Or should your job be handed over to some younger man or woman?

That's a hard question, isn't it? The American Federation of Labor, at its recent convention, said it was a cruel question and protested against "unreasonable, uneconomic and brutal discriminations against men and women workers because they were 45, and in some cases 35 years of age."

Going further, the A. F. of L. claimed that the big insurance companies were largely responsible for this, since, in many cases, they refused to grant group insurance to plants that hired employes over that age.

You're glad to read that, aren't you? And at once you think of all the unfair cases you've known—"perfectly wonderful people dropped just because they weren't kids any more." There's Cousin Jim, who's as strong as he was at twenty, and he's only 41 now; yet they fired him. And Mrs. Arnold, too, a splendid woman, let out cold after she'd worked in the same office 21 years! Yes, you could name scores of cases. Your own, perhaps? Your blood boils when you think of the injustice of it!

BUT WAS IT INJUSTICE?

Could these "perfectly wonderful people" really "work as hard as they ever had, if not better?" Or had they actually become dead wood?

Yes, I know; you resent that insinuation. But wait a minute before you blow up. I'm as interested in this question as you are; more so, perhaps. I'm over 40. Some day I, too, may be dropped. If that happens, will it be because I'm "not a kid any more?" Or will there, perhaps, be another reason?

There'll be another reason. If I'm dropped, it won't be because my years have disqualified me. IT WILL BE BECAUSE I HAVE DISQUALIFIED MYSELF BY MY OWN LAZINESS, COWARDICE. PREJUDICE AND CONCEIT—BECAUSE I HAVE LET MYSELF BECOME UNFIT.

If I'm dropped I won't realize this. Instead, I'll deny it indignantly. I'll say it's because "someone has it in for me." I'll accuse my boss of "unfair discrimination." I'll be mad as hops and terribly sorry for myself.

Yet I, and I alone, will be to blame. And, though, I won't be able to see it then, I can see it quite plainly now. I can see it by studying the men and women of my own age who are being dropped.

Those men and women are as furious and hurt as I may be some day! They don't think they are being dropped because they've let themselves become unfit. But they are, and they have. And it all came about very simply, and quite unconsciously.

When they were twenty they knew they had to fight to get ahead. They had to think quickly, be flexible, step lively, make experiments, keep their curiosity and initiative at razor edge.

So they did fight. Then came success. They had "arrived." They were a power in their particular world. They could let up a bit—take things easy.

AND THE DAY THEY BEGAN TO TAKE THINGS EASY, THAT DAY THEY BEGAN TO LOSE THEIR FITNESS, THEIR VALUE AS WORKERS.

Their bodies were still healthy enough. Their records were still excellent. But they had LOST CONTACT.

As a consequence, it became increasingly difficult for them to adjust themselves to other people and changing conditions. And so they're fired—and they don't know why.

IT ISN'T THE FLABBY MUSCLE OR THE STIFF JOINT THAT DISQUALIFIES US AFTER FORTY, IT'S THE FLABBY BRAIN, THE STIFFENED IMAGINATION, THE DRIED OUT HEART, THE COOLED OFF COURAGE.

Over forty, we COULD be as good as we ever were.

BUT HOW MANY IN YOUR ACQUAINTANCE REALLY ARE?

AND WHOSE FAULT IS IT IF THEY AREN'T?

Think it over.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

It's Hard to Believe, But—

It's hard to believe it, but the average girl who wears one of those funny peaked hats, like little Jocko's, isn't doing it in order to pay an election bet.

There will never be any real equality between the sexes, so long as every woman must struggle to hang onto her youth and beauty, while a man can have three chins and a bald-spot, and still think of himself as "dangerous" or "eligible."

In spite of all her "independence," every normal woman secretly glories in the sort of man who can rule his OWN WOMAN—and subconsciously feels a mild scorn for the lassitude of the man who permits her to "back-seat-drive" him through life.

When it comes to a question of which has the more endurance, one can only observe that a man groans louder when he has a toothache or a pain in the stomach—and a woman wails louder when she has a heartache or a pain in the vanity.

A man's success is not measured by the people with whom he can boast of shaking hands, but by the people who can boast of shaking hands with HIM.

The average man, these days, appears to take merely a casual interest in a woman's kiss, a speculative interest in love and an academic interest in marriage.

The honeymoon is waning, when the bridegroom begins to recall all the "warnings" his bachelor friends gave him.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Often those in trouble do not need condolence—don't deserve it.

The condition of trouble may be the result of laziness, indifference, carelessness or thoughtlessness.

In this case reprimand should be of more benefit than sympathy.

Usually the one who seeks sympathy wants to avoid responsibility for the unfavorable things which have befallen him.

If he can gain sympathy from friends, he forgives himself easily for the failure he has made.

If the friends were honest they would help him by telling him the truth.

Too often friends are afraid of anything they think might sever friendly ties, so they condone faults and do not speak out frankly in criticism.

These friends become greatly to blame for shortcomings of associates.

There is only one way to improve and that is to know where error lies.

Don't be a fault-finding friend but do be a friend who is not afraid to speak honestly whether to voice praise or criticism.

By Edwin C. Hill

FAR out in space, somewhere in the vast constellation of Theta Draconis, an ordinary well behaved comet goes on a spree. Charging recklessly through the void it smashes through whole communities of tiny stars, sending them whirling in all directions, knocked forever out of the heavens.

Down they come over Europe, these slaughtered baby stars, dying as they fall with a last flaming burst of light, as if the whole firmament were filled with the explosion of gigantic Roman candles. The superstitious fall upon their knees, fearing that war is about to burst over the continent. Heaven forfend such another madness, but the signs are disturbing.

One wonders why little Switzerland has increased her army to 40,000 men, almost doubling its strength. The thrifty Swiss don't spend money on military preparations unless they know something or suspect something. And Switzerland is the shortest road from Germany into Alsace-Lorraine.

The French, revealing the iron hand in the velvet glove of disarmament talk, are rushing to completion along their whole frontier the greatest system of fortifications in military science, building a great wall of China against the one enemy they fear in the whole of Europe. And the curious news comes to us that British subjects are selling the real estate they own along the French Riviera.

Even more significant and disturbing is the "return to Germany" sentiment which seems to have developed in the border territory, Alsace and Lorraine, taken from Germany by France under the Treaty of Versailles. This territory was German for a thousand years. Then, after conquest, it was held by France for 180 years until Germany won it back in the Franco-Prussian War, only to lose it again in 1919, after the World War.

And in Warsaw, Poland, the new Polish army, French-trained, parades through the streets of the capital while the people scream their pleasure and thunder their pride.

Heine's Warning To France

THIS whole situation, revolving around the manifest purpose of a Hitlerized Germany to seek revenge and regain lost territories, makes one think of what one of the greatest Germans, Heinrich Heine, the German Jew who loved France, wrote as a warning to her almost exactly one hundred years ago. He predicted that there would arise in Germany one whom he called "the Natural Philosopher."

"He will [illegible]rible," wrote Heine, "because he is in co-operation with the primitive forces of nature; because he can conjure the demonic forces of the old German Pantheism and awaken the love of battle found in the old Germans, which does not fight to destroy or to win, but just to fight. Christianity, and that is its most beautiful value, has somewhat softened this brutal Germanic lust of battle, but could not destroy it."

And Heine predicted that the day would come when the old stone gods would arise from the forgotten ashes and rub the one-thousand-year-old dust from their eyes, and that pagan Thor with his giant hammer would leap forth and destroy the Gothic Dome. And Heine added these strange words of counsel:

"When you hear this din and tumult, beware! Do not interfere in this business that we at home in Germany accomplish. A play will be performed in Germany in comparison to which the French Revolution would seem only a harmless idyll. But the hour will come. As on the steps of an amphitheater, the nations will group themselves about Germany to watch the great battle.

"I advise you, Frenchmen, remain quiet. I mean you well, and therefore I tell you the bitter truth. You have more to fear from a freed Germany than from the whole Holy Alliance, including all the Croats and the Cossacks. For firstly, one does not love you in Germany, which seems incredible, for you are amiable. What it is they have against you I could never understand. If we should feel like attacking you there will be no difficulty in finding urgent reasons.

"Whatever comes to pass in Germany, whether the Prussian Crown Prince, or Dr. Wirth takes command, remain quietly at your posts, the gun under your arm. I mean well by you, and I was horrified when I heard recently that your Minister intended to disarm France. You know the Olympus. Among the naked gods and goddesses who are enjoying themselves with nectar and ambrosia, you will see one goddess who, though surrounded by joy and revelry, always wears an armor, a helmet on her head, and carries a spear in her hand. She is the Goddess of Wisdom."

Europe Bristles With Suspicion

SO HEINE wrote a century ago, and so might he have written today of the Germany under Hitler. And plain to the eyes is all Europe today, an armed camp, bristling with suspicion, shaken by fear, seething with old animosities. A Europe very difficult for us sentimental, idealistic Americans to understand; an old Europe which doesn't change her ways in spite of all the peace conferences and disarmament parleys; a Europe out of whose affairs we had better stay, far off indeed, committing ourselves to nothing, forbearing to create irritations by our fair intentions and our dreams of swords beaten into ploughshares.

Spoils System Threatens Success of 'New Deal'

By James T. Williams, Jr.

OF ALL the wolves of politics that attack the vitals of good government in the United States today, the most ravenous is the spoilsman.

It is the spoilsman who insists that public offices should be filled by the operation of what is known as the "spoils system."

Under this system a public office is treated, not as a public trust, but as spoils to be distributed by the political party which wins an election. Hence the phrase, "To the victors belong the spoils."

This vicious system is chiefly to blame for the party boss and the political machine that degrade the general political life of the nation.

To the operation of the "spoils system" can be traced many of the most flagrant evils in politics today—including the waste and the corruption that disgrace the administration of local government all over the country.

Both political parties and every administration, federal, state and local, are plagued by the spoilsmen of the party winning the election. The Roosevelt administration is no exception to this rule.

Demand Extension Of Spoils System

FROM THE day Mr. Roosevelt was elected President the spoilsmen of his party have done their utmost to dictate the appointments of his administration. These spoilsmen have not been content to dictate who should fill the federal offices not now protected by civil service laws. Such is their greed that they are now demanding a general expansion of the "spoils system" to all parts of the federal service.

What the federal service most needs today to increase its efficiency is an extension of the merit system, as a substitute for the "spoils system."

Under the merit system, an employe is selected after an examination to determine his qualifications for the office he seeks, without reference to his political affiliation. Employes selected in this way are not subject to dismissal for political reasons. Their advancement in the service depends upon their efficiency records.

Army and Navy Under Merit System

FOR EXAMPLE, the Army and Navy are manned today under a merit system. This is one reason why our armed forces are so effective. They are uncontaminated by the operation of the "spoils system." Appointments to these services and advancement in these services are not dictated by the spoilsmen of politics.

But there remain over 75,000 out of a total of over 600,000 federal positions that are still filled without any real test of qualifications and largely upon the say-so of some spoilsman of the party in power.

Nor does this number include the thousands of new positions which have been created either temporarily or permanently since the present administration entered power last March.

His experience as Assistant Secretary of the Navy and as Governor of New York has given Mr. Roosevelt ample proof of the superiority of the merit system to the "spoils system." He has already promised since he entered the White House to urge Congress to extend the merit system throughout the postal service. It ought not to stop there. It ought to extend to all other branches of the federal service.

And until the federal service is given the protection throughout of appointments made under the merit system, the "New Deal" in federal affairs will fall far short of its goal.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

Ever Flowing

Like a river going
To the far sea's gleam,
Song is ever flowing
In a silver stream.

In the city's cries,
Song that never dies!

Even in the lower
Calls of dusk and dawn,
When life's pulse beats slower,
Song keeps flowing on.

Though past the surmising
Of our finite ears,
Splendid song is rising
From the spinning spheres.

Faint, or stronger growing,
As man's days pass by,
Song is ever flowing
Through his destiny.
